Orthokeratology

If you looked at this title and thought, "this is Greek to me", you were absolutely correct. It's a word of Greek derivation which means literally, "the science of straightening the cornea."

In recent years, it has become possible to reshape the cornea through the programmed application of a series of special contact lenses. These are similar to regular contact lenses except that they are designed to compensate for blurred sight AND make modifications. In many instances, restoring the correct curvature of the eye may eliminate altogether the further need of corrective lenses. Then, all that is required is the INTERMITTENT use of a "retainer" lens to maintain this correct curvature.

Why go to all the bother?

Indeed, many people are satisfied with their contact lenses. But for others, whose occupational and recreation activities can best be performed with NO LENSES AT ALL, orthokeratology might be a real blessing. Swimmers, flyers, athletes in contact sports, police, firemen, for example, all know that there are times when neither contact lenses NOR glasses are entirely practical.

Injuries To The Mouth

Sports injuries, auto accidents, or even a simple fall or collision involving the mouth may require a dentist's help to prevent loss of teeth.

There may be no sign of broken, chipped, or cracked teeth. But there may be other signals that something is wrong. The impact of a fall or collision can tear the delicate blood vessels inside the pulp of a tooth, causing it to bleed. This will cause a discoloration of the injured tooth. If it isn't treated in time, it may abscess. If you wait for that to happen, you may lose the tooth. Prompt treatment by a dentist can save it. The key word is prompt.

If a tooth has been cracked, the dentist may make a splint to hold the tooth in place. Then there is a good chance the tooth can heal itself. Broken teeth present a greater problem. But if the root is intact, it can usually be saved.

Any mouth injury should be checked by your dentist. Why take chances on losing teeth? No replacement tooth is ever as good or as strong as the original.
