Sen. Helms Reports From Washington

WASHINGTON—In last week's report, I discussed some, but not all, of the glaring defects in the legislation approved by Congress just before Christmas to increase the federal gasoline tax by five cents.

As you probably noted, the news media had a field day with the fact that some Senators were irritated because I refused to let this proposal glide through the Senate unopposed.

Many Senators were indeed unhappy, because their top priority was going home for Christmas. They were not in the mood to defer this 27 1/2 billion dollar additional tax bite until adequate consideration could be given it. They just wanted to go home.

POLITICS—A number of highly respected Senators came to my defense against the attacks on me by Senator Kennedy, Senator Cranston, Senator Ford, and Senator Simpson. I suspect that you have read nothing at all about comments by Senator Russell Long of Louisiana, Senator Bill Armstrong of Colorado, and others. The comments by these Senators—in my defense—were buried in the news stories if they were used at all.

Senator Ford of Kentucky made a blatantly political statement. He is a very partisan Senator who claims to be a great friend of the tobacco farmer. But I cannot forget that Senator Ford flatly refused to go to bat for the tobacco farmers back in July when I sought to cut down on the cigarette tax increase. I proposed that the taxes on beer, wine and hard liquor, along with cigarettes, be increased by the same percentage. (My proposal would have cut the cigarette tax increase down from eight cents to two cents; it would have increased the tax on beer about a penny a can, and on wine and hard liquor by a relatively small amount.) Senator Ford would not hear of it. Apparently he was more interested in his whiskey manufacturers in Kentucky than in his tobacco farmers.

One further note: When the survival of the tobacco program was on the line in the Senate last July, Senator Ford was able to persuade only 22 Democrats to vote to save the tobacco program. Had it not been for the 32 Republicans who voted to save the program, it would have been a disaster. So, when Ford tries to play politics with the tobacco program, he should first look at his own efforts.

KENNEDY—Senator Kennedy is—well, he is Ted Kennedy. I did not run for the Senate to win a popularity contest with Mr. Kennedy. I cannot think of anything in his personal or private life that I admire, and I suppose he feels the same way about me. So when he attacks me, as he frequently does, I consider it an honor.

As for trying to defeat this gasoline tax increase, I would do it all over again. It was one of the most tiring experiences of my life, but it was a fight that I felt should be waged.

REAGAN—I am obliged to say that I feel President Reagan's advisors did him great harm when they persuaded him to reverse his position on this proposal. Originally, he had been totally against it—and he was right the first time.

I still admire Ronald Reagan, but I will never be a yes-man for him or any other President. Nor will I refuse to take a stand when I believe that a worthy principle is at stake. I felt that this gasoline tax proposal was a bad bill, proposed at the wrong time and in the wrong manner.

The outcry from the liberal politicians and partisan editors was predictable. But in this instance, I don't believe the people will be fooled. I have been comforted—and grateful—to note the overwhelming support I have received from people all over the country. They know when they are being snookered.

Letter To The Chowan Herald Editor

Dear Editor:
A unique opportunity is available to people across the United States who have suffered a heart attack. The Hyperlipidemia-Atherosclerosis Study is a nationwide investigation which aims to answer a compelling issue in medicine today, "Will the reduction of serum cholesterol retard or reverse the atherosclerotic process that causes heart attacks?"

We need you to help in our recruitment of possible participants by printing the enclosed press release. With heart disease, America's #1 killer, causing more than 750,000 deaths each year, this is a topic of certain interest to your readers.

Eligibility criteria for the study are stringent, making patient recruitment a massive task. It is an effort that needs constant exposure in the media. As a federally funded program (a five-year grant from the National Institutes of Health) our support comes from tax dollars and therefore the public must have an opportunity to learn about this project.

The study covers traveling and lodging costs for both the participant and an interested family member. Patients learn significant information about their conditions, even by just coming in for the three day, out-patient screening (which does not obligate them to participate in the study).

Recruitment will continue until May of 1983. Time is at a premium. Your help at this point is more valuable than ever.

Please call me at (215) 645-3340 if you have any questions. Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Janet H. Axelrod,
East Coast Media Rep.
