

Edenton Possible Motion Picture Site

Answer Final Summons

Death cut a wide swath through North Carolina's elder statesmen Sunday, Sept. 7, carrying away in one fell swoop a former Governor, a former ambassador and an legislator with wide business interests and civic accomplishments.

Daniel Killian Moore, 80, best known of the three, was governor of North Carolina from 1965 to 1969, but gave most of his adult life to service on the bench, first as a Superior Court judge, then as an associate justice on the State Supreme Court.

Capus M. Waynick, oldest of the three, was an ex-High Point editor who, before his death at 96, had touched more bases in government service than would be thought possible nowadays.

And Hargrove Bowles, Jr., 66, succumbed to Lou Gehrig's disease after having survived perhaps the toughest test of all—he rose from a crushing political defeat to continue, without rancor, a lifelong record of service to others.

Dan Moore died in Duke Medical Center, Durham, losing a running battle with cancer. He was buried in Raleigh. He entered the race for governor in 1964 "with little money and a lot of friends." Running as a middle-of-the-road mountain man, he overcame two strong opponents in the Democratic primary and won the general election in November.

The late 1960s were troubled times. Racial tensions were running high, with riots, marches and confrontations making headlines across the nation. Labor unrest was widespread and the economy was in a state of suspended animation, with little certainty whether it would rise or fall.

But Dan Moore brought to office the judicial temperament which comes from years of service on the bench; and, when all else is Edenton may be the location of a major motion picture according to Kathleen Miller, Executive Director of the Edenton-Chowan Chamber of Commerce.

Miller said that the chamber has been working quietly behind the scenes with Kenflight Films on details such as filming locations and accommodations for a film crew of fifty.

The film scenario takes place in 1944, during World War II, and is a father-son "feel good movie," she said. Kenflight is a subsidiary of Sundance Productions, owned by Robert Redford. Miller said that, contrary to popular belief, the film star has not been to Edenton and was not expected to visit. Casting for the film has not yet been announced.

Edenton was chosen as the film's location with the assistance of the N.C. Department of Commerce's Film Office. Film executives were flown by state helicopter along the coast in their site search. While the air tour was inconclusive, Miller said Edenton got the nod when the film's director visited here over the Labor Day weekend.

She said the court house green caught the film director's eye since the final scene in the movie takes place at such a location. The company has a list of other area locations to be used that include Swain School, the court house, war memorial, the old Marine Base, peanut mill and one or more houses.

Miller said that several chamber members had been hard at work in assisting the effort to bring the film here. They have taken many color photos of houses and buildings, inside and out. "This is probably the most photo coverage the town and county has ever had in such a short time," she said.

A search is on for "first-class accommodations" for the cast and crew. The living quarters would be required for four months beginning in early January when filming has been tentatively set to begin. Miller said that vacant private homes are being sought. The film company will pay for housekeepers.

The executive director has maintained contact with the film's director and producer as plans progress and she expressed initial surprise that they were women. Miller characterized them as "lovely, lovely, young ladies."

Peggy Anne Vaughan has accepted the position as liaison for the chamber with the film company.

Miller said that the $10 million production will have "at least one major film star" but, "we don't know yet if the film will materialize."

Edenton Aces Defeat Pirates

The Edenton Aces met Perquimans Friday night in their traditional rivalry and after the dust had settled, the scoreboard showed the Aces with 22 and the Pirates with a goose egg.

Under the threat of thunder storms (one developed and then blew over just prior to kickoff) the Aces defense shown through. Both sides had trouble holding on to the ball during the first half — Edenton fumbled three times, but recovered each one on a 78 yard drive for the only score of the first half, leaving the field with a 6-0 lead. The drive was capped by an eight yard pass from quarterback Erie Downing to DeRonne Felton.

The second half saw Edenton continue to march down the field in two offensives, one for 77 yards and the other for 70 yards. Two-point conversions capped each drive.

Perquimans was plagued with penalties each time they came within scoring range of the Aces. With a minute remaining in the first half, the Pirates were on the Aces' 16 yard line after a fumbled punt return by the Aces. An unsportsmanlike penalty call foiled that opportunity. Twice in the second half the Pirates were called down for the same infraction. Edenton outpointed the Pirates on the ground with 211 yards to 190

Sixteenth-Century Sailing Vessel To Arrive Here On October 21st

Elizabeth II, North Carolina's representative 16th-century sailing ship, will depart Sept. 20 from her home port of Manteo embarking on a six-week journey that will take her to Elizabeth City, Winton and Edenton.

The Department of Transportation Tug Albemarle will tow the ship from Shallowbag Bay to Albemarle Sound, where she will sail on her own, weather permitting. The tug will assist in channels and when sailing is not feasible.

On the first leg of her journey, Elizabeth II will travel to Elizabeth City, arriving there in time for the 28th annual Albemarle Craftsman's Fair. The ship will be docked at Waterfront Park and open for visitation from Sept. 25-29.

Visitors to the Craftsman's Fair will be treated to demonstrations of quilting, weaving, pottery, basketry and other crafts. The ship's boat, Silver Chalice, will be on display as an example of wooden boat building. Activities will be at the Knobbs Creek Recreation Center.

The ship will leave Elizabeth City on Sept. 30 and travel up the Chowan River for a three-week stay in Winton in Hertford County. Numerous activities, including an official welcome ceremony on Oct. 4, have been planned by community groups to coincide with the visit of Elizabeth II. While in Winton, the ship will be open for tours from Oct. 2-20.

The final port-of-call for Elizabeth II is Edenton. The ship will arrive on Oct. 21 and be open for visitation Oct. 22-23.

While in Edenton, the ship will be the centerpiece of a street fair on the Edenton waterfront commemorating the Edenton Tea Party. On Oct. 25 a ceremony is scheduled to celebrate the first political activity by women in the American colonies. On that date in 1774, colonial women sent a resolution to England declaring they would not purchase highly-taxed British goods, including tea.

The ship will depart from Edenton on Oct. 29 for Manteo and will reopen in her home port on Nov. 4.

While in ports-of-call, Elizabeth II's hours are 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. School groups are scheduled heavily from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Tours of the Elizabeth II are $3 for adults, $2 for senior citizens and $1.50 for children. Groups of 10 or more receive 50 cents off the admission price.

Elizabeth II, a state historic site, is an agency of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.

A fish fry was held in his honor behind the Chowan Jail by area law enforcement officers and court personnel. Patterson (l.) is shown chatting with Judge J. Richard Parker (r.) and D.A., H.P. Williams.
