'Lost Colony' Film Showing Is Planned

By REBECCA BUNCH miss a special movie showing Local film buffs will not want to planned for the evening of April 30 in Edenton. The featured attraction will be "The Lost Colony", the oldest existing film made in North Carolina. It tells the story of England's ultimately unsuccessful attempts to settle the Roanoke Island area between the years 1584 - 1587. Edenton residents Robert Brent Drane, Fred Drane and Jule Wood appeared in the 1921 film, which was directed by Elizabeth Grimball of New York. Mabel Evans of Manteo wrote the script.

The movie, which was produced by the State Board of Education in a collaboration with the State Historical Commission, was originally intended to be the first in a planned series entitled, "North Carolina Pictorial History", but none of the other films were ever made. During its initial release period, the five reel, 45-minute film was shown in schools and communities throughout North Carolina. It preceded the Paul Green outdoor drama of the same name by 16 years.

Tom Whiteside, a filmmaker and film historian, will bring the movie to Edenton. He is currently the visiting artist at Halifax Community College, and has been studying the state's film history for the past two years. A showing of several of Whiteside's experimental films is planned for this summer in the North Carolina Artists' Exhibition at the N.C. Museum of Art in Raleigh.

He is married to the former Susan Inglis, daughter of Ross and Frances Inglis of Edenton. The Whitesides live with their two children in Halifax, N.C.

Due to limited seating, reservations will be required. To reserve seats, or for further information, please call the Barker House Visitor Center at (919) 482-2637 or (919) 482-3663.
