

ABLE Tutors Are Needed

The Adult Basic Literacy Education (ABLE) Center at College of The Albemarle needs volunteer reading tutors to help its students this fall, according to center director Mary Partin.

Partin is urging anyone who is willing to give three hours a week helping new readers, to call the center office at 335-0821, extension 227. "Tell your neighbors, friends, co-workers, club members and anyone whom you feel will respond, that we need tutors," she said.

Training sessions for new volunteers have been scheduled on Monday, September 21 and on Monday, September 28. The first workshop on the 21st will be held from 3 p.m. until 4:30 p.m., and from 7 p.m. until 8:30 p.m.

The workshop on the 28th will be from 2 p.m. until 4:30 p.m., and from 7 p.m. until 9:30 p.m.

Van Duyn Honored At NCSU Luncheon

North Carolina State University has bestowed a high academic honor on one of its faculty members who works in Eastern North Carolina.

He is Dr. John Wey Van Duyn, who lives in Edenton and works out of the Tidewater Research Station at Plymouth.

NCSU named Van Duyn a Philip Morris Professor at a luncheon in his honor in Raleigh on Wednesday (Sept. 9). He is the first off-campus faculty member ever accorded this honor.

Philip Morris Professors received a $9,000 salary supplement made possible by a permanent endowment established by Philip Morris U.S.A. The endowment, established in 1978, enables NCSU to have three Philip Morris Professorships.

Van Duyn, an entomologist, is credited with helping develop one of the nation's first integrated pest management systems for producers of corn and soybeans. Such systems rely on biological as well as chemical means for controlling pests.

Dr. Durward F. Bateman, dean of NCSU's School of Agriculture and Life Sciences, noted at the luncheon that the coastal area in which Van Duyn works is the most ecologically sensitive agricultural region in the state.

Van Duyn has worked at the Tidewater Research Station in Plymouth since 1971. He is a specialist with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service, a component of NCSU. This means that he works closely with extension agents and farmers in addition to doing applied research. He also advises NCSU students.

Dr. Larry Sykes, director of agricultural programs for Philip Morris U.S.A., praised Van Duyn as a "risk taker".

"The nation was built by risk takers," he added.

Van Duyn called his honor "an award to be shared."

"People do their best work," he said. "when they work cooperatively with other people."

Van Duyn holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Florida. He earned a doctorate at Clemson University in 1971, after which he joined the NCSU faculty. He was named assistant professor in 1974, associate professor in 1977 and professor in 1983.

He has been named Outstanding Contributor to the North Carolina Soybean Industry, received the NCSU Outstanding Extension Service Award and was nominated in 1985 and 1986 by the Entomological Society of America for its Distinguished Achievement Award for Extension, receiving the award last year.

Accompanying Van Duyn at the luncheon were his wife, Gwen; and three sons: Gerret, Wynn and Jason. Also present were his mother, Ruth Van Duyn, Jacksonville, Fla.; brother and sister-in-law, Bill and Linda Van Duyn, Orange Park, Fla.; and father and mother-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Earle Stapleton, Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

Participation Encouraged

Recognizing that North Carolina's fight against drugs must be supported at the local level, Gov. Jim Martin is urging community leaders and elected officials from across the state to participate in "Challenge '87: North Carolina's Fight Against Alcohol and Substance Abuse" September 28. The one-day conference is being held at the Jane S. McKimmon Center on the N.C. State University campus from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

"We have asked every community to establish a local task force or coalition on substance abuse," the Governor said. "The 'Challenge '87 conference will help facilitate this process and help local leaders structure these coalitions," he added.

Giant Lobster On Display

The largest live spiny lobster on display on the East Coast is at the North Carolina Aquarium at Fort Fisher.

The 12-pound, 21-inch lobster was caught August 29 by fisherman Raymond H. Key Jr. of Winston-Salem, fishing aboard the Winner Speed Queen out of Carolina Beach. Captain Skeets Winner kept the lobster alive and took it to the Aquarium.

Aquarium curator Paul Barrington identified the specimen as a Panulirus argus, a male over 20 years old. After checking with other major aquariums, Barrington discovered the surprise catch is the largest spiny lobster on display along the entire East Coast.

According to Barrington, spiny lobsters normally range from North Carolina southward to Florida and the Caribbean. They have a normal maximum length of 20 to 24 inches

The North Carolina Aquariums, located at Fort Fisher, at Pine Knoll Shores and on Roanoke Island, are open year-round Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

The Aquariums are administered by the Office of Marine Affairs in the N.C. Department of Administration.
