On Coming Together

Now that the election is over, the best thing that could happen for the United States is for the people, of whatever persuasion, come together for the common good.

Now is the time to ask in one united voice, not what can the country do for us, but what can we do for our country. Now is the time to put aside petty differences, selfish motives and unworthy goals and work together toward those ideals that go to make up the American dream.

Both at the state and national level, we have had campaigns dedicated to the lowest common denominator, with mud slinging geared to high technology, good names maligned and records distorted at a time when honest people hungered for the truth.

We have heard again all those old racial code words of the 1950s and 1960s in a poorly disguised effort to appeal to bigotry north and south. Law and order, capital punishment, the right to keep arms and related expressions are once again political shorthand for keeping the blacks in their place.

And the blacks themselves have done much to make those words effective political tools as this decade winds down. This has been true, especially in the south, where many white citizens have come to regard such court-approved standards as affirmative action, crosstown busing, quota funding and district gerrymandering to accommodate minority blocs as discrimination in reverse.

Substance Abuse Is Local Concern

officers have at various times recently remarked on the seeming public apathy in Edenton and Chowan County concerning substance abuse, both alcohol and illegal drugs.

Sheriff Fred Spruill was asked why neighbors with strong suspicions of drug sales in their neighborhoods do not report them to law enforcement. "They don't want to get involved," was his re-

A look at the record since Spruill's swearing in as sheriff in December of 1986 gives an indication of the scope of substance abuse in the town and county.

Large Turnout At Polls

Bond Referendum Passes

By JACK GROVE

A large voter turnout was seen in Tuesday's elections as 4,469 went to the polls in Chowan County of 6,959 registered to vote. This comprised a 64.2 per cent turnout.

While figures were unavailable at press time, Perquimans apparently had a large turnout as well. General Manager Pete Manning of The Chowan Herald said that Perquimans officials called in two emergency printing orders for additional paper ballots for that county that doesn't have voting machines. The first was for 1,000 ballots and the second was for 1,500.

A concentrated effort by county leaders to encourage voters to approve the $7 million school bond issue was hugely successful. Eighty-six per cent voted yes on the bond issue. The totals were 2,429 for and 389 against.

There were 1,641 voters who didn't pull the lever for the referendum. Schools superintendent, Dr. John Dunn, said at the county elections office, "that's better than 35 per cent of the total vote.'

He speculated that many missed the issue due to the placement of the lever in the top central portion of the voting machines.

In an apparent repudiation of the national Democratic Party, Chowan voters chose the Presidential ticket of Republicans George Bush and Dan Quayle over Democrats Michael S. Dukakis and Lloyd M. Bentsen. Bush-Quayle received 1,884 while Dukakis-Bentsen polled 1,756 or a difference of 128 votes. Local voters joined the state and nation in naming Bush as the next President.

The New Alliance Presidential ticket of Lenora B. Fulani and Wynonia B. Burke hardly got a nod. Their total vote was 14.

There are only 1,090 registered Republicans in Chowan County, or 15.6 per cent. There are 181 unaffiliated voters. In the Republican column, 50 are black.

In the race for governor, more Democrats "came home," giving Bob Jordan 2,454 to Gov. Jim Martin's 2,033 or a margin of 421. Martin walked away with the race in the state. He was undoubtedly helped by some Chowan Democrats.

Democrat Tony Rand, running for Lt. Gov. against Republican Jim Gardner, received a wider measure of local support with 2,284 to Gardner's 1,611. The race, as of mid-day Wednesday, was still undecided.

Longtime incumbent, U.S. Congressman Walter B. Jones again left his Republican opponent Howard Moye in the dust as he swept the election in the First Congressional District.

In the First District race for seats in the General Assembly, the three Democratic incumbents won handily.

Sen. Marc Basnight really had no opposition as Republican Daniel W. Lawrence had pulled out of the race earlier, but not soon enough to take his name off the ballot. Basnight polled 2,649 to 752 and was returned to office by the districtwide vote total.

Chowan favorite son, Rep. R.M. (Pete) Thompson, took the largest total here with 2,965. Rep. Vernon James wasn't far behind with 2,340. A distant third was Republican Shirley Perry with 921.

Mrs. Perry had a few surprises in store though as she ran a respectable race in the largely Democratic district.

She took Dare County with 4,085; 3,873 for James and 3,529 for Thompson.

Totals for other counties were: Camden, Thompson, 1,190, James, 1,503, Perry 743; Currituck, Thompson, 1,692, James, 2,061, Perry, 1739; Gates, (portion within first district) Thompson, 340, James, 339, Perry, 140; Perquimans, (Perry's home county) Thompson, 2,150, James 2,087, Perry, 1,305; Tyrrell, Thompson, 1,024, James, 941, Perry, 313; Washington, (four of five precinct totals available) Thompson, 2,442, James, 2,485, Perry, 1,019; and Pasquotank, (James' home county) Thompson, 4,588, James, 4,383, Perry, 3,066.

Thompson, along with a roomful of supporters at Caroline's, followed the results as they came in and he was seen to smile more and more often.

In a brief phone interview, after Thompson had talked with him, a normally expansive Sen. Marc Basnight said at 10 p.m. "I accept whatever the voters choice is on the national, state and local level." Basnight has supported the candidacy of Bob Jordan since its inception and returns were showing Jordan in deep trouble. Basnight seemed subdued.

Of his close relationship in the General Assembly with Thompson and James, he said, "We work well together." That comment was taken as a victory statement.

All of the Council of State races went to the incumbent Democrats in local voting.

Owners Fail To Attend Hearing

In their regular monthly meeting Monday morning, with only one citizen in attendance, the Chowan Board of Commissioners dealt with a routine agenda.

A public hearing was held to receive comment regarding the proposed preliminary assessment roll for Okisko Trail, With no property owners in attendance, the final assessment roll was approved.

The Albemarle Commission in an annual rite, asked each of the members of the tencounty Region R to execute resolutions releasing their shares of a regional economic development grant to the commission. The Chowan Sheriff's the ambulance and he was Dept. is investigating an assault that occurred at the residence of David Walton on N.C. 32 north of Chowan Middle School.

When EMTs approached to assist him, he resisted them and fell to the ground. White and the EMTs loaded him into
