

Anne Rivers Siddons' latest is at library

The Indwelling: The Beast Takes Possession by Tim LaHaye and Jerry B.

Jenkins is the latest in the best-selling Left Behind Christian fiction series. The seventh book chronicles the tribulations of those remaining on earth after the Rapture:

From Anne Rivers Siddons, Nora, Nora (with a pink Thunderbird convertible on the cover) features two cousins in a small Georgia town in the early sixties. One is living a fairly lonely life until the other arrives, ruffling local feathers when she teaches the first integrated honors class at the high school. One reviewer called the story a mix of delicacy and Southern discomfort.

Omerta by Mario Puzo completes his Godfather saga. The Aprile family is making the transition from organized crime to the beginnings of legitimate business. They still have too high a profile, however, to escape the attention of the FBI and ultimately they are drawn into one last war. Omerta is Sicilian for the code of silence that kept even rival Mafiosi from ratting on each other.

Victoria Gotti, real-life Mafia daughter and novelist offers a Hollywood thriller: Super Star. Two girls, one with all of life's privileges and the other with very few, aspire to stardom and meet as they climb the ladder to fame. The twist is that the two were switched at birth.

Two mysteries: McNally's Folly

ROSALIE BOYD

with Florida detective Archy McNally was written by Vincent Lardo in the style of the series' originator, the late Lawrence Sanders. When Archy gets involved with the Palm Beach Community Theater, the back-stage action mirrors the deadly on-stage plot.

Shakespeare's Trollop by Charlaime Harris takes place in a small Arkansas town where cleaning woman/amateur sleuth Lily Bard can out-detect the local police any day.

Jamés Grippando's Under Cover of Darkness concocts a chilling story in a Seattle lawyer's family. When his wife disappears, Gus Wheatley fears the worst - that she was abducted and may be dead. Then the police find evidence that leads them to believe she not only left voluntarily, but also that she went as an accomplice to a serial killer.

On Secret Service by John Jakes begins as the Secret Service is organized during the Civil War. The characters are closely linked with historical figures: Allan Pinkerton, John Wilkes Booth, George McClellan, Jeb Stuart and, of course, Abraham Lincoln. Most of the action takes place around Washington, D.C. where intrigue is rampant and politics are volatile. Jakes is getting good reviews for an engrossing read and an excellent depiction of the period.

The China Bride by Mary Jo Putney is a good, old-fashioned historical romance with well-developed characters and interesting background material. Set in the 1830s, a young titled Englishman wants to travel into the interior of China, an area forbidden to foreigners.

Elaborately disguised and with the help of a native guide, he sets out.

But the guide is woman dressed as a man and, well, you know the rest. An earlier book by Putney, The Wild Child, introduces the English family.

Gravesend Light by David Payne takes place in a Wanchese-type fishing village on the Outer Banks where traditional thinking and outside ideas collide and simmer to boiling. An anthropologist retreats to his family's summer cottage and takes a job on a fishing boat. He meets and falls for a Yale-trained OB-GYN resident whose ideas are not widely accepted. The descriptions are excellent and do not have the feel of the Outer Banks. There's a harrowing fishing trip when the boat is caught in a storm. Looks to be a really good read.

Beyond the Gathering Storm by Janette Oke continues the story of Henry and Christine, raised as brother and sister by the Delaneys. Now young adults, Henry is a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Christine moves to Edmonton to find her first job.

Get Happy: The Life of Judy Garland, again examines the tragic life of this well-known personality. Beginning with extensive background material and concluding with a description of the funeral attended by 22,000, author Gerald Clarke seeks to reveal new information about the star whose life was a series of crises.

From Dawn to Decadence: 1500 to the Present is on the non-fiction best-seller list, no mean feat for a history book. Although the author believes we have been in a period of cultural retreat, he also believes it to be part of a natural cycle and that a surge of great creativity will follow.

Dorling Kindersley's Complete Sailing Manual is lavishly illustrated with sidebars, diagrams and color photographs for sailors of all levels of experience.

In the major decisions category, we have added several books about career and education choices. The newest Occupational Outlook Handbook is here as well as Choices for High School Graduates and But What If I Don't Want to Go to College? There's more help from College Planning for Dummies and College Financial Aid for Dummies (There's an oxymoron in there somewhere!).

The Edenton Lions Club installed their new officers for the year 2000-2001 during their annual Officer Installation and Ladies Night affair held at the American Legion Building. The Lions' wives were their special guests, along with a number of the widows of former Lions.

Norman White was installed as president, succeeding Blair Currie. The new president and the other officers of the club were installed by Robert L. Clinkscales of the Hertford Lions Club. This event celebrated the 64th year of the Edenton Lions Club.

The officers for the year 2000-2001 are: President, Norman White; First Vice President, Bud Miller; Second Vice President, Roger Nash; Third Vice President, Bill Hall; Secretary, Walter Noneman; Treasurer, Ralph Outlaw; Tail Twister, Bob Zembraski; Lion Tamer, Joe Volk; Song Leader, Jesse Harrell; and Directors, Gene Perry, John Atkins, Earl Johns and Roy Johanson.

President Norman White moved to Edenton after retiring in 1990 from the Chesapeake Police Department. Upon retiring, White was Detective Lieutenant of the Chesapeake Police Department. He and his wife, Kathryn, have two sons and a daughter. One son is following in his father's footsteps and is a Lieutenant in the Camden County Sheriff's Department.

White graduated from Norfolk County High School and Old Dominion University. In retirement, besides Lionism, he is an avid golfer and enjoys working with crafts, especially woodworking.

During the evening, outgoing president Blair Currie reviewed the club's many contributions to individuals, the community, the recent flood victims and to Lions District 31-J. The meeting ended with outgoing President Currie passing the gavel to the Edenton Lions new President, Norman White.

Korean War vets to be honored here

In support of Edward G. Bond Post 40's effort to honor Korean War veterans on Sunday, Aug. 27, the Town of Edenton and Chowan County have issued proclamations expressing gratitude on behalf of the community for all the sacrifices made by Korean War veterans and their families.

"The 'forgotten war' is forgotten no longer," said E.C. Toppin, event spokesperson.

All veterans, especially Korean War veterans, are invited by the entire Post 40 family to gather together on Sunday, starting at 1 p.m., for an old-fashioned family picnic, Toppin said. At 3 p.m., there will be a formal program, then more socializing. Entertainment will be provided by the Albemarle Sounds and Sue Britt.

The commemoration will conclude at sunset with a formal flag disposal ceremony.

Any questions, please call Legion Vice Commander Joe Volk at 482-5505.
