Council to consider 4th term appointment

Kalbach being considered to stay

The Edenton Town Council will consider at its Sept. 11 regular monthly meeting whether Airport Commission Chairman Jim Kalbach can be reappointed to his post since he has served the maximum three terms. Kalbach's most recent term has expired, but he could be reappointed should the council decide that special circumstances exist for an exception. Kalbach has been closely involved in plans for a solar farm adjacent to the airport, a project the town has been working on with Duke Energy.

"The town's code of ordinances calls for a three-term limit on the town's various boards and commissions," Town Manager Anne-Marie Knighton explained in an email. "There is a provision in the code that allows for a person to serve a fourth term if special circumstances warrant an additional term."

Councilman Steve Biggs, who serves as the Town Council's liaison with the airport commission, said during a council committee meeting on Aug. 27 that he had been very impressed with the job Kalbach had done in the past.

"He has done an outstanding job of serving as chairman of the airport commission," Biggs said in recommending that the council consider reappointing him. Biggs chairs the council's administrative committee which brings board and commission appointments before the council.

Councilman Willis Privott agreed.

"I don't know that we've had anybody that's done the job he (Kalbach) has done," Privott said. "I really think he deserves another chance."

After the meeting Kalbach said he would be happy to be reappointed to the airport commission especially in light of the pending solar farm project. A lease agreement for that project was also among the items on the agenda at the Aug. 27 meeting but action was continued until the Sept. 11 meeting.

Kalbach, 71, works as a part-time consultant for Whitener Capital Management headquartered in Rocky Mount. "Since I just work part-time, I have the time to do it and would be happy to continue serving on the commission," he said.

Also open is a vacancy on the town's recreation advisory board left by the expired term of Steve Gabel. Gabel, having served three full terms, is not eligible for reappointment. Knighton said the town plans to advertise for potential candidates.
