Dirt Lane performing Food Pantry fundraiser concert on Friday

From staff reports

This Friday night, Nov. 18, Debbie and Malcolm King at Edenton Bay Trading Company will host a concert featuring "Dirt Lane" to fundraise for the Edenton-Chowan Food Pantry.

The fundraiser concert will take place from 7-9 p.m.

"Dirt Lane" is a local duo who play a mixture of new and traditional songs related to North Carolina. Their first set consists of original compositions by the band and features stories celebrating the richness of the Albemarle Sound, and feature people and events in South Mills, Elizabeth City, Hertford, Edenton, Avoca, Plymouth and the Outer Banks.

Gerard Cooney, one half of the duo, is a newcomer to Edenton and played in musical groups in New Zealand. Tim Orton, on bass guitar, played with several local blues and rock bands including 'Uphill,' 'Anutha Zone,' and 'Uphill' with Adam Nixon.

This is a free concert but donations to the Edenton-Chowan Food Pantry are appreciated. The Pantry is staffed primarily by volunteers and provides critical help to many people and families in need of basic support from our community.

In the past fiscal year, the Pantry provided 189,558 meals to 5,777 households in the area. Although over 56 percent of food is donated by businesses, individuals and churches, around six percent of essential food items are purchased by cash donations.

Tim Orton, left, and Gerard Cooney, collectively known as Dirt Lane, will perform at Edenton Bay Trading Company on Friday, Nov. 18 from 7-9 p.m. The concert is free, however, donations for the Edenton-Chowan Food Pantry will be gratefully accepted that evening.

When it came to the fourth condition - that the project would be in "harmony" with the surrounding property, Commissioner Kyle Jones voted he wasn't convinced it was.

After the vote on the four issues, the board had to take a final vote on the project as whole and give it a thumbs up or down.

"They boxed themselves into a corner," said Leary Winslow, one of the opponents of the Timbermill Wind project. He was referring to how could a commissioner could vote

"yes" on the overall project when they had voted "no" on one aspect of it.

A sixth commissioner, Matt Peeler, was recused from voting because a majority of the board said he had shown he'd already made up his mind before the hearings started. Peeler has been an opponent of wind power. He was there Monday night, but sitting in the audience instead of with his fellow commissioners.

"I thought of a lot of ways this (vote) could go, but I didn't see this one coming," Peeler said.

The only two commissioners who voted for all four of the aspects of the project were Chair Janice Cole and Commissioner Ed Muzzulin.

Apex officials had no immediate comment.

But Tommy Harrell, one of the property owners who has fought hard against Apex, did speak.

"I'm exuberant," he said. "It's been a hard, emotional battle to protect what is ours."

people obviously selected her to do the job," Wadsworth said. "That's how I look at it. I just think that people chose who they wanted."

Kersey said she looked forward to Wadsworth's counsel regarding issues and challenges facing the county.

She said she appreciated the support of her husband, Les.

"I want every citizen in the county to know that I will work tirelessly on their behalf," Kersey said.

Faircloth bucked a county-wide trend that favored Republican candidates. President-elect Donald Trump carried the county, and two of the county's three contested commissioner races went to Republicans.

Faircloth, the president of Edenton Construction Company and a former president of the Edenton-Chowan Chamber of Commerce, said he thought his reputation in the business community helped him in the election. "I think I'm pretty well known out in the business community and I think a lot of people think I've got pretty good business sense," Faircloth said.

Faircloth said he had been concerned that a lot of people would vote straight-ticket Republican and that the straight-ticket voting would affect his race.

"Fortunately I was able to get enough people to cross over and support me that I was able to be elected," he said.
