

Pets of the Week

Omar loves belly rubs and is learning to trust being on a leash. He is shy of men, but once he has a chance to warm up, he quickly comes around.

Lexie is a young girl with energy to burn. She would do best in an active home where she can be her happy puppy self.

We have kittens! Plenty in all shapes, sizes and colors. Kittens can always be adopted for a BOGO price.

Ginger is a beautiful long hair girl who enjoys attention. One scratch of her head, and she is melting at your feet.

The Tri-County Animal Shelter and Adoption Center is on Icaria Road in Tyner and can be reached at 221-8514.

Exhibit features Matheson's photography

Talk about photographers preceded reception

Stephen Fletcher works to preserve glimpses of North Carolina's past through photographs.

Part of that past is explored in the Chowan Arts Council's latest exhibit featuring black and white photography of Hillsborough native Elizabeth Matheson. Fletcher, a photographic archivist with the North Carolina collection at Wilson library at UNC-Chapel Hill, spoke about the work of Matheson and other North Carolina female photographers before the exhibit's opening reception Thursday.

What makes Matheson's work special is that she traveled around the state, photographing architecture and landscapes.

After his talk, Fletcher discussed how UNC archives decides to add to its collection with Chowan Herald Staff Writer Miles Layton.

"We're looking for collections of work by photographers who have a certain project that they've done or long-standing career of note," he said. "That's why we have the negative archive of Hugh Morten. We have the negative archive from the Durham Herald-Sun."

Morten (1903-1984) was a photographer and nature conservationist who developed Grandfather Mountain.

Fletcher noted that most of the items accepted by the archives are in decent shape. A decision is made whether the subject matter is better served by local institutions rather than by UNC.

"For a statewide project, we'll take a look at it and see if there's a local historical agency. If the photographs are strictly negatives, they require strict temperature and humidity controls."

During his talk for the CAC, Fletcher centered discussion around the theme, "Wooten: Penland; Matheson: Edenton." Mary Bayard Morgan Wooten (1875-1959) lived in New Bern and gave her neighbor Caleb Bradham the name and logo for his creation, Pepsi Cola. She was the first woman to make a photograph from an airplane in 1914 and is known for her photographs of North Carolina, including Penland, in Mitchell County.

Matheson put Edenton in the spotlight through her black and white photographs used in the book "Edenton: A Portrait in Words and Pictures." The book is available at the CAC and the Barker House.
