

THREE POINTS OF CONTACT

More news may be obtained in the great dailies of the state and nation than in your home newspaper, but no more vital news may be obtained than that carried in your local county paper.

The most successful man in any endeavor in which he must have the co-operation of the public is the man who can most effectively get in touch with the greatest number of the people at the least cost. The cheapest method of reaching the most people is through an ad in THE CHEROKEE SCOUT.

Fine stationery and neat printed matter speak louder than words. It is not how cheap you can get your job work done, but how good. In this office we combine quality and pride. The next time you want printing, try THE CHEROKEE SCOUT.

THE CHEROKEE SCOUT
MURPHY, NORTH CAROLINA

Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes is between the devil and the deep blue sea—only it is red liquor as usual, which is at the bottom of his troubles. To add to Haynes' ordinary discomfiture, the reform committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church charges that he was being shoved into the back-ground in dry law enforcement, and that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Revenue Commissioner Blair had taken the reigns away from him. Haynes denied this in a formal statement, but the Philadelphia North American, one of the oldest newspapers in the country, charges that Haynes was compelled by "higher-ups" to make this denial. The North American, which is regarded as dry, propounded a list of highly embarrassing questions for Haynes to answer, but he has ignored them. It may be necessary, after all, for the President to take a personal hand in prohibition enforcement.

Now that former Senator Frank Kellogg, one of the "lame ducks" of the Harding administration, has been picked up by President Coolidge and given one of the finest ambassadorial appointments extant—that of representing the United States in London—the political wiseacres in Washington hardly know what to expect of Coolidge. The Kellogg appointment has revived the dying hopes of a lot of other defeated Republican Senators and Congressmen and they will soon be knocking at the Whitehouse door for any plums which they can get.

One of Washington's final official acts in winding up the Harding administration was the acceptance and deposit by the National Museum of one of the evening gowns which Mrs. Florence Kling Harding wore while she was the First Lady. The dress will be exhibited on a wax figure of Mrs. Harding along with the gowns of all the presidents' wives from Martha Washington down.

J. R. McCarl, of Nebraska, the Comptroller General of the United States, who came to Washington a few years ago as a Congressman's Secretary, is one of the most talked-of young men in Washington these days. For two years he has been the center of various squabbles and more or less serious controversies over the payment of claims against the government, and he has aroused the wrath of Cabinet officers and lesser officials by refusing to listen to their advice. McCarl maintains that he gets his authority from Congress and no where else. His latest jump to the first page came about through the payment by his office of a $33,000 claim, over the objection and in the face of the opposition of the Veterans Bureau.

The word has gone out that President Coolidge does not intend to make any speeches until he addresses Congress next month on "The State of the Union." This will be Coolidge's first message to Congress and every word it contains will be carefully weighed and considered before it is tossed into Congressional ears. The President is expected to deliver the message in person, thus following the precedent established by Wilson and continued by Harding.

LADY GOT SO WIAK COULD SCARCELY STAND

After Suffering From Many Female Troubles This Lady Heard of Cardui and Took It, She Says, "Until I Was Well."

"SOME TIME AGO," says Mrs. Buena McFarland, of R. F. D. 2, Bostic, N. C., "I suffered a great deal with weakness common to women. I had bearing-down pains, my sides and back hurt, and my limbs drew. I would get so weak in my knees I could scarcely stand. "I was very nervous, and could not rest. I didn't feel like eating. I grew thin, and did not have ambition for anything. "I had been trying other remedies, but did not get any better. "Some one told us of Cardui, and what it was recommended for. I also book a Ladies Birthday Almanac and read of a case something like mine. I did my husband to get it and I would try it. "I saw a great improvement after the first bottle (of Cardui), so I kept it up until I was well. Now I am the picture of health." Thousands of other women have written, to tell of the beneficial results obtained by taking Cardui, and to recommend it to others. Cardui has stood the test of extensive use, for more than forty years, in the treatment of troubles common to women. Try it.
