History Speaks Concerning Lee as a Leader

Volumes could be written on this subject. In the limited space at hand we quote just a few paragraphs from the most prominent sources:

"Essentially a man of character," is the terse way Charles Francis Adams puts it.

The New York Herald said: "Never had mother a nobler son. In him the military genius of America was developed to a greater extent than ever before. In him all that was pure and lofty in mind and purpose found lodgement. He came nearer the ideal of a soldier and Christian general than any man can think of for he was a greater soldier than Havelock, and equally as devout a Christian. Displaying neither bitterness nor regret over the irrevocable past, he conquered us in misfortune by the grand manner in which he sustained himself, even as he dazzled us by his genius when the tramp of his soldiers resounded through the valleys of Virginia."

Professor George Long, a distinguished scholar of England, wrote to a friend in Virginia: "If I were not detained here by circumstances, I would cross the Atlantic to see the first and noblest man of our day."

Professor Worsley, of Oxford, sent Lee his translation of The Iliad of
