DAIRY PICTURES ARE BEING SHOWN IN THE COUNTY

New Cream Station Established in The Martins Creek Section This Week

Dairy pictures are being shown in the county this week by County Agent R. W. Gray in co-operation with H. R. Farnham, Raleigh, of the Dairy Division, North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

The pictures are educational, cover the dairy industry and its side lines, hogs and poultry. Mr. Gray reports that the pictures are being enthusiastically received, and large crowds have witnessed them at each showing. Mr. Farnham also delivers a lecture on dairying as a part of the program.

This week also witnessed the establishment of a new cream station at W. H. Abernathy's in the Martins Creek section. This station will begin taking up cream on Friday, August 19th.

The establishment of this station will act as an inducement to the people of the Martins Creek section to begin to sell cream in small quantities with a gradual increase, who otherwise would not take the trouble to bring to town small quantities. Some 18 months ago a cream station was established at Brasstown. The first week, only 43 lbs of cream was received, but now over 1000 lbs are being received weekly, and provides a source of revenue for the people of that section. It is planned to establish another station in the county either this week or at an early date, just where the county agent could not say.

Around 1200 lbs of cream is being shipped out of the county at present, and it is expected that this amount will be doubled in a few months, as the dairy industry in the county is beginning to expand rapidly.

The lighting and power for the picture machine used in putting on this dairy program in pictures is being furnished by the Asheville Deleo Light company, under the direction of Messrs. Kite and Green.

Mr. Hays, Swine Extension Specialist, of the Department of Agriculture, was also in the county this week, looking over the work recently done with the hogs of Mr. J. H. McClure. While here he planned to begin co-operative feeding of other herds of swine in the county.

There will be a Sunday School Rally at Ranger church on Sunday, August 14th, 1927. Program in the forenoon and speaking and songs in the afternoon.

Everybody invited to come and bring their own lunch.

The score was close, with the three classes, two of them tied and the other won by one point, according to the decision of the judges. The people of the Salem community are certainly to be commended for their hospitality, as they certainly spread a bounteous board, and the large crowd present showed their appreciation of it by helping themselves.

It is not a situation to be desired but a novel one nevertheless to see a dozen or more automobiles stranded because of mud and the failure of the front ones to go along on a narrow road. Such was the situation Sunday afternoon as we all returned from the Singing Convention. It had come a rain and had gotten the roads very muddy and we all had some time getting in, although no accident befell any one.

It begins to look like work will soon begin on the Hot House road.

JACK VOYLES DIES SUDDENLY WHILE SWIMMING

Had Been Diving Across Stream And Died of Over-taxed Heart, Is Physician's Diagnosis

Jack Voyles, about fifteen years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Voyles, died suddenly Friday afternoon while in swimming from an over-taxed heart, caused by diving and remaining under water too long in a succession of diving feats, according to physician's diagnosis.

Jack and several companions were in swimming in the river, when he was performing a diving feat and crossed the stream in twenty-two seconds, and immediately tried to break this record several times without waiting long enough to get his breath sufficiently before trying again, and it is believed this overtaxed his heart and lungs and caused his death.

After making the trip across the stream under water several times, he succeeded in lowering the record to 22 seconds. According to his companions, he stood up in the edge of the water and remarked that it was hard work, and began to sink down. They picked him up and placed him on the bank and began working with him and sent for medical aid. Jack died in about fifteen minutes, and shortly after the physician reached his side.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the Baptist church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. L. Sasser, and interment was in Sunset cemetery.
