W. C. MORROW, M. D., County Health Officer. Some Suggestions For People On Vacation

Most North Carolina people take their annual vacations some time during the months of July and August. This not only affects the well-to-do in the leisure class and the office workers and job holders in general, but to the large farm population of the State as well. In short, the roads of this State are crowded practically every day during July and August with every known type of automobile loaded to capacity with happy folks, and their baggage, off on a trip. This is a fine procedure because it enables people to become acquainted with their fellow citizens in the other counties. It also enables the people of one section of the State to learn something of the manners and customs of living of the people of the other sections of the State. There are a few precautions, however, if happiness is to be maintained throughout the trip, and safety as well as happiness follow the return home. Some of the precautions we would like to mention may be enumerated as follows:

For those who camp by the roadside or in one of the many places set aside for tourist camping, the available water supply should be carefully scrutinized, and unless it is of known and proved purity, the drinking water should be boiled at least five minutes before drinking. When there are children along who are susceptible of any one of the various communicable diseases, careful inquiry should be instituted when other children are found in the camp, perhaps coming from a far distant section of the country. If there is any danger of exposure, the party should move on or keep the children entirely separated. This precaution also applies to the travelers who stop in hotels and at the different resorts. The food consumed in tourist camps or along the roadside should be carefully chosen. This applies particularly to milk. Milk is one of the finest foods for roadside consumption, especially for children, but unless the supply can be obtained from high class dairies or pasteurized milk in some of the towns, while passing through, it would be much safer and better to purchase some of the various brands of dry or evaporated, unsweetened milk. The dry milk, when prepared according to directions, affords a palatable substitute for fresh milk, and it is absolutely safe when taken from the can and prepared with clean water of known purity. Dry milk retains its antiscorbutic value and is therefore a safe and reliable food product for vacationists when away from their regular dairy home supply July 1, 1929.

Mr. G. W. Candler, accompanied by his brother, Dr. Candler, of Sylva, visited relatives in Bristol, Va., this week. They left Sylva at 6 o'clock in the morning and arrived in the Virginia city at 10:30 that morning, making the trip of more than 180 miles in four hours and thirty minutes. Mr. Candler reports that roads and scenery were as fine as he had ever seen.

Mrs. Bill Cleveland spent several days at Copperhill, Tenn., where she was the guest of friends and relatives.
