Pale and Weak

"I THINK Cardui is a wonderful medicine, for I improved greatly after taking it," says Mrs. A. W. English, of R. F. D. 4, Roanoke, Va. "When I was just a girl of 13, my mother gave this medicine to me, and it did me a great deal of good. I was weak and run-down. After I had taken Cardui awhile, I felt much better. "In 1924, my health was poor. I felt miserable, and hadn't enough strength to do my housework. It took all my willpower to keep up. I was pale and weak. "I got Cardui again and took it. My improvement was wonderful. I can recommend Cardui to others, for my health was so much better after I had taken a course of the Cardui Home Treatment."

A TRIP TO PALESTINE

By Rev. Howard P. Powell

Standing on the eastern side of the Mosque of Omar we looked down upon the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, the place where the lame man sat as Peter and John went up to the temple to pray, an account of which you may read from Acts, the third chapter. This gate is within the present city wall.

Turning towards the south, we cross the platform to the arcades on its southern side, passing on the way the marble pulpit of Burnhameddin which was built by the judge of that name in the middle of the 15th century. Beyond the pulpit you may see the fountain ablutions. Farther on we come to the Mosque of Al-aqsa, which is near the old site of Solomon's temple. In this mosque we were shown footprints that were said to be those of Christ, but it was only a commercial fraud. To the right in the rear of the mosque there are two marble columns very close together. Years ago there was a superstitious practice among the Mohammedans of passing between these columns, which assured an entrance into Paradise. This was practiced to such an extent that more than eighteen inches of marble was worn from the columns. We were told that some years ago a man of some two hundred pounds did in the effort of passing through the narrow way. For several years now they have not practiced this ridiculous form of worship. A Mohammedan worshipper in the mosque during the relating of this story by our guide very indignantly corrected the guide saying that it was no longer practiced. However, the columns testify for themselves that thousands at some time passed through this test.

From the Temple Area we went to the pool of Bethesda, which is by the site of the old sheep market. After seeing this pool one can sympathize with the poor impotent man of the fifth chapter of John. In order to get into the pool it is still necessary to descend by two flights of steps. Some of our party went down to the pool, which is a small unattractive body of water.

Leaving the pool of Bethesda we journeyed through the Via Dolorosa. To Christian visitors, this is the one street of supreme interest. It leads from the Old Serai (now barracks) near the north eastern corner of the Haram enclosure to the Holy Sepulchre. No doubt the historical evidence for the site of this sacred street and the Fourteen Stations of the Cross is slight and contradictory indeed, the tradition dates only from the beginning of the sixteenth century. It is true that even if the present streets follow the route of the Via Dolorosa, we are not actually treading in the footsteps of our Lord, for Jerusalem has been so torn and shattered since that time that the cities of David, Herod, and the Crusaders lie buried in successive strata. Nevertheless, one cannot pass through this street without serious meditation as he realizes that it was somewhere in that section of the city that Jesus carried His cross.

While passing along this street we went in to the Convent of the Sisters of Zion. In the Convent we paused for a short lecture by one of the sisters in a little chapel that is said to have been built over the spot where Pilate's Judgment Hall stood when Christ was brought before him. Passing through the Convent we noticed a "warning" which read something like this: "No woman with bobbed hair, or dressed in men's clothing allowed to visit here."

A broken column on the lower floor of the Convent of the Sisters of Zion marks the place where Christ is said to have fallen exhausted by the weight of the cross. It was from this spot that the cross was carried by Simon. It does not matter so much to one in this vicinity as to the exact spot of the steps to Calvary, it was enough to know that He carried in that direction the "Old Rugged Cross." This thought was enough to bring us to a new realization of His pain and agony.

We will now visit the Jew's Wailing wall, which was on Friday afternoon, the time when most of them are to be found there. "The traditional place of wailing of the Jews is at a point in the western wall of the Temple Area, a little south of Robinson's arch. It has been the traditional place of mourning over the downfall of the City of David for many centuries." Here we saw these poor Jews weeping and chanting their hours away with sad hearts. They believe that in this wall are the only remaining stones of the City of David. They ask for pardon that their holy and beloved house may be quickly rebuilt.

We are now planning a shopping tour to the city of Jerusalem. (To be continued)
