HOW TO GET THE BLUE EAGLE

Here is the way to get the blue eagle: Secure a copy of the President's agreement from the postoffice, if you haven't already received one. Read it carefully, received one. Read it carefully, and if you can, sign it and mail the agreement in the addressed envelope. The small slip en-closed with the agreement, you are to sign and take it to the postofice and the postmaster will then give you your blue eagle for your store window. But you sign the President's blanket agree ment before you are clipible for ment before you are eligible for th blue eagle. District head-quarters of the NRA Norfolk, Va. makes the list for posting in the postoffice and not the local rostmaster.

Of outstanding interest through-out the State and Western Tennessee was the marriage here this evning at 8:30 o'clock of Miss Marianna Pigott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Pi-gott, of Copperhill, Tenn., and Mr. G. W. Cover, Jr., youngest member of the last General Assembly of North Carolina. The ceremony took place in St. Andrew's Lutheran church with the Rev. H. G. Geiger, arch-deacon of the East Tennessee district of the Episcopal church, of-ficiating in the presence of a large congregation of relatives and friends. The church was profusely decorat-ed with green hemlock, many bas-kets of flowers, and myraids of can-dles. Mrs. Marguerite Smathers Jones, organist and choir director of Trinity Episcopal church, of Ashe-ville, presided at the organ and played a delightful program of mu-sic prior to the ceremony. Her num-bers were: "Berecuse" by Godard. "Serenade" by Schubert, "Even Song" by Martin, "Vision" by Rhein berger, "Andante" from "Surprise Symphony" by Haydn, and "Pomp" and Circumstance" by Elgar. She played the wedding march from Lo-hengrin for the bridal procession. During the ceremony she played Listz's "Liebetraum" impressively. The wedding march by Mendlessohn was used for the recessional. Miss Jane Cover, sister of the groom, was the maid of honor and was attired in canary colored chif-fon with large picture hat in the same delicate shade. She carried an arm boquet of yellow gladioli tied with bute ribbon. Miss Bess Beavers, and Miss Mary Longworkh, of Copperhill, were the only other attendants.
