DEATH

(Thomas Burke Gray)

"I shall not die today," he said.
"My time has not yet come."
But e'er the night had slipped away
Those smiling lips were dumb.

One shudder racked his powerful frame,
One ponderous sigh escaped;
Thru window blew a wraith of mist,
And o'er his form it draped.

And faint footsteps they seemed to hear,
As it passed across the room,
And in Gethsemane, they too,
Heard footsteps in the gloom.

The hushed night seemed sorrow-
tensed,
And faces dark with fear
Bowed down in solemn silent prayer
For Death was passing near.

A single touch from wisp-like hand,
A breath upon the brow,
And stilled forever is the arm
That guides the lowly plow.

No more into the fields he goes
With eager, willing hand,
But rests, oblivious to all;
Lived, died, filled Time's demand.

Dr. and Mrs. Petrie Entertain

A pretty social event of the past week was the bridge party at which Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Petrie entertained at their attractive home as a courtesy to Dr. and Mrs. L. U. Lumpkin. Dr. Lumpkin is surgeon at the Petrie Hospital.

Relieves Women's Pains

Here is an example of how Cardul has helped thousands of women: "I was very thin and pale," writes Mrs. F. H. Scott, of Roanoke, Va. "I suffered from weakness and a severe pain in my back. This pain unnerved me, and I did not feel like doing my work. I did not care to go places, and felt worn, tired, day after day. "My mother had taken Cardul, and on seeing my condition she advised me to try it. I have never regretted doing so. I took three bottles and it built me up. I gained in weight, my color was better and the pain left my back. I am stronger than I had been in some time." Cardul is sold by local druggists.

NEWS PICK-UPS

There's a boy in town whose occupation is going around and chipping little stones with a tack hammer for Uncle Sam (while the boys in the pen in Atlanta bust big ones for rothing) who eats in one of our cafes regularly.

The other evening he sat down facing the window when his girl parked outside in a car. His pulse got a little irregular and he got that far-away look in his eyes—and the first thing we knew believe it or not, he got his knife and fork clean off the plate and was sawing on the table cloth.

Four people from Cherokee county recently went to the Kentucky derby. And of all the people there, and of all the bets that were made, and of all the horses that ran, darned if one of them didn't cash in on Bold Venture. She said she had never been to a horse race before, either.

If you wake up some of these nights and think a locomotive has hit the side of your house you can lay your bottom dollar it's just one thing—a 50-stick-of-dynamite blast from the old soapstone quarry across the river.

If you think this is the machine age, you may or may not be right. But evidently Dr. Ralph McDonald thinks so. For he used the word "machine" exactly 163 times in his speech Monday night. (And Ed Studstill and Pug Rogers thought we were taking notes Ha, ha).

Warren Sneed turned us in a note for our social columns this week: It read: "The Junior Woman's club held their regular meeting in the drug store every afternoon this week." You oughta know Warren, but watch out for the general convention Sunday.

H. A. Mattox is a very thoughtful guy. He's now cruising around on the west coast some place, and when he wrote his dad the other night he told him to kiss the editor for him.

So just for spite we'll tell what he told us the other night: "Imagine going to the West coast—and having to take your wife."

Use the ironing board the next time, Rosie. It doesn't hurt as much as the iron, but it lasts longer.

It is generally known that the first assignment a city editor gives a new reporter is a check-up of some public place to find out how many odd articles have been lost.

We've been almost two years getting around to it this time, but we contacted Mr. Ware at the court house the other day and asked him if he ever found anything and this is the story we got:

"We don't ever find anything because nobody's got anything to lose around here."

Of course you've herd that old joke about the salesman who said to the store keeper, "I'll bet you five dollars you've got four doors in this room".

The store keeper, after business of looking around, says, "Nope there ain't but three. I'll bet you five."

Then the drummer, picking up the money, says, "Oh, yeah? You Lose. There's a front door, a back door, a side door and a cuspidor.

Well, the third door in the office of the commissioners of the county is set smack in the middle of the room.

"That's so's they can hit it from all angles", Marion Simonds told us. "Some of the folks around here are kind of old and their sights bad and if it's setting against the wall we'd have to paint it up a couple of times a year."

persons are asked to come and help and honor the dead.
