[QUESTIONS THAT ARE ASKED ABOUT BANKING]

"How does a Bank handle out-of-town checks?"

WHEN you deposit a check written on a distant bank, your bank ordinarily routes it for prompt collection to a city correspondent bank with which it maintains an account, or to a Federal Reserve Bank. The following steps are usually taken:

1. The account of your bank is credited with the amount of the check at the correspondent bank or Federal Reserve Bank.
2. The check is charged against the account of the bank on which it is written.
3. It is sent to the bank on which it is written, and charged by it against the account of the person or firm which issued it.
4. The amount is then credited to your account as soon as advices are received that the check has been honored.

Our bank is a part of this nation-wide system which transfers funds safely, quickly and conveniently.
