

MOTHER WHO KILLED THREE CHILDREN IN MAD MOMENT FREED IN FLORIDA

TAMPA, Fla., May 13.—Mrs. Irene Sanders, 29, a tragic, but still attractive little figure in a new traveling outfit, walked out of the Circuit Courtroom here Saturday, free to pick up the broken threads of her life and forget if she can, that night three years ago when her mad mind drove her to kill her three children and attempt to take her own life.

Behind her she left three indictments for murder—one for each of her children. The indictments will continue hanging above her head as a sword the law may bring down at any time.

Circuit Judge L. L. Parks and Harry N. Sandler took the recommendation of State Attorney Rex Farris and the reports of physicians here and the Florida State Hospital for the insane and released her without bond at a special session of court.

From the courtroom she went straight to the railroad station and took a train, alone, for Oklahoma City. There she will join her family.

It was the first time the slender hazel-eyed woman, estranged wife of a grocery clerk, had been free since Jan. 17, 1934. When she recovered from the attempt to kill herself that night, she was taken to the State Hospital for the Insane. Released there in January, 1937, she was returned to the county jail here and held until the two judges' ordered set her free Saturday.

They took several minutes to thumb through reports handed them by Farris. The woman to whom their decision meant so much could not hide her nervousness. She dabbed at her eyes with a hankie. Ran a hand over her hair and looked at the toes of her shiny new pumps. The doctor's reports said she could not be held responsible for taking the lives of her children.

Judge Parks and Sandler asked her only one question: Whether she felt able to make the trip alone. She murmured a hardly audible "Yes."

In the cold impersonal language of the law, the state attorney's records alleged this to have happened.

One night fearing death and illness the young mother—she was married when she was 18—gave her three children sleeping powder. The oldest was seven; the youngest a babe in arms. She huddled them in her automobile and drove into the country.

Placing a blanket on the ground, she laid the sleeping youngsters out on it and shot them one by one, with a pistol. Then she turned the weapon on herself. But a nervous hand faltered, and the shot missed her heart.

Tonsil Clinic

A tonsil clinic to be held at the Petrie Hospital on May 23 and 24. Dr. A. C. Duncan, of Forest City, will be here to conduct it. Would like for those who intend to have tonsils removed to call for appointments.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of thanking and expressing our appreciation to the many loyal friends and neighbors, also the beautiful floral offerings and assisting us before and after the death of our dearly beloved brother and father, Mr. Bob Stiles who departed this life on May 3 at the age of 83.

Million See Rehearsal Of Coronation Parade

LONDON, May 13.—Undaunted by a cold drizzling rain, throngs estimated at nearly 1,000,000 persons fought and jammed their way into the streets between Buckingham palace and Westminster Abbey early Sunday morning to watch the final rehearsal of the coronation procession.

It was the show for the masses, the chance for those who can not witness Wednesday's brilliant spectacle to get an idea of what the progress of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to their coronation will be like.

The outpouring was the largest crowd in London since the funeral of King George V 16 months ago, vast assortment of shivering bedraggled but happy human beings who cheered wildly at the sight of the empty gilded coach of state and the various mounted military contingents.

It provided an excellent preview of the throngs that will swarm through London on coronation day, three days off.

That evening the police had difficulty clearing a way through the London crowds for the King and queen as they returned by automobile from Windsor, where they had been resting for the arduous week ahead.

At the palace their majesties welcomed several royal guests arriving from abroad for the coronation and were hosts at an informal dinner attended by visiting royalty and the king's brothers, the Duke of Gloucester and Kent, and their wives.

Outside the palace gates about 30,000 persons gathered.

Queen Maud of Norway and Queen Mother Mary, driving to the palace for the dinner, also had difficulty making a way through the throngs. Policemen commandeered a taxi occupied by three unidentified girls out sightseeing in order to lead a way for the two queens through the crush of traffic.

The girls lowered the taxi's hood and stood on the back seat waving hats and handkerchiefs to the crowds evidently getting the thrill of a lifetime out of such close proximity to two queens.

Things Unusual

Several hundred decently dressed men in New York City own no shirts but rent them from an ultra-modern laundry company at the rate of 50 cents weekly for the use of three shirts. A small reduction in the charge is made to those who use more than three a week. Customers like the service, which guarantees a clean shirt with all buttons in place when wanted.

Recently a news dispatch told of an Ohio professional parachute jumper who had made 2,226 leaps from airplanes without an accident. He got into the news only through being badly hurt when he fell from an automobile trailer.

If one is restless and his bed is near an upper story open window it is a good idea to hug a pillow. By doing so Richard Griffith of Baltimore escaped with only minor bruises when he rolled out of a third floor

1939 Crash Is Predicted By General Dawes

CHICAGO, May 13.—Gen. Charles Gates Dawes, who forecast the end of the depression, predicted in a book released Monday that 1939 would bring "another stock market collapse and a minor recession in business" lasting one to two years.

The Chicago banker and former vice-president wrote: "I predict, barring wars or inflation of the currency that a high degree of prosperity will maintain in this country until 1939."

"That beginning in the latter part of the year October 1938-October 1939, to wit: In the summer or fall of 1939, there will be a stock market collapse."

United States a minor recession in business of one or two years.

"That this recession will be followed by a period of prosperity."

In the book "How Long Prosperity?" Dawes traced a similarity of 1873, 1893 and 1929 and concluded that the next market collapse should follow the last by approximately 10 years.

The book recites that Dawes, in December, 1934 predicted a seasonal rise in demand for durable goods that would signalize the end of the depression. His forecast was made in an address before the Chicago Association of Commerce and attracted nation wide attention.
