

UNWED MOTHER HELD AS SLAYER OF TINY INFANT

Baby Declared Buried Alive; Father, Sister Lodged in Jail Here

Monday Patterson, unmarried, of the Shooting Creek section of Clay county, is being held without bond in the Clay county jail on a charge of murder of her new-born baby, according to Sheriff E. O. Smith of Hayesville.

Lester Patterson, father of the girl and Eliza Patterson, a sister, are being held in the Murphy jail as material witnesses.

Sheriff Smith stated that he arrested Miss Patterson after receiving evidence that she had allegedly given birth to her child and later disposed of it in a manner unknown.

An investigation by Sheriff Smith and Oscar Atkins, E. B. J. man, Saturday brought about the arrests. Miss Patterson was questioned but refused to talk. The father and sister also refused to make any statements, and were brought to the Murphy jail for safety. There had been talk of summary vengeance.

No date has been set for the hearing in the case, but Sheriff Smith said he expected developments later this week, when Federal agent Atkins will return, and a more thorough investigation will be made.

A belief was voiced that the child had been taken out and buried alive.

Gal Writes Boy Friend About Plans For Fair

and whatnot, and the place looked almost as messy as your bedroom after you've gone out in the morning. But that's all different now, Jim. The grounds have been rolled and smoothed and "prettied up".

I don't need to tell you that nearly always, when we have a Fair, it starts to rain, and everybody gets all drenched up with mud. Well, this year the Fair Commissioners are planning to spread a regular carpet of sawdust—or maybe cinders—over the grounds. Then they can look up at the sky and say: "Now, darn ye, go on and rain—and see if we care!"

Better still, Jim, we're going to have two new buildings. The old exhibition hall was pretty nearly a disgrace to a fine county like Cherokee, and so, Glory Be! it's going to be torn down, and a new one put up. They're going to build a special stand for livestock, too.

They've bought the old cannery factory that belonged to Mercer Fair. The good one, too, for the Fair Commissioners and the Murphy Town Board each gave $125 in taxes, and the Fair Commission kicked in $250 cash.

Now the WPA is going to tear down the cannery and move it over to the fair grounds and men will be hired to put up new buildings. They'll be good ones, too.

Best of all, Jim, the exhibit building won't be allowed to just stand there doing anybody any good except once a year. It's going to be fitted up as a modern gymnasium for the public school students—and a fine new bridge across the river to the school grounds, is just about finished.

I guess that's all for this time, Jim—but I'll write again next week and keep in touch with how things are going.

Meanwhile don't make any dates that will keep you away from the Fair!

I'll be seeing you,
Fondly yours,
Hot Helen.

McClure Shot Trying To Prevent Robbery

The youth whom young McClure is believed to have saved from robbery, and possible murder, is Robert L. West, a recently discharged sailor from the U. S. Navy, who stopped off in Murphy enroute from Norfolk, Va., to his home in Alabama.

He had recently been discharged from the service and had nearly $100 in cash in his pockets. This was saved, but his clothes, with the exception of those he wore, vanished with the stove repair man.

Waiting for a bus to take him out of Murphy, West got hold of some liquor. The stove repair man was given several drinks. Then the latter suggested that he would drive West to Alabama if the latter would buy the gas and oil. West consented, had the car tank filled, and they started.

They stopped at the Playhouse and the sailor went in to buy beer. Refused because he was under the influence of liquor, he tried to argue, showed a roll of money and offered to "pay double".

Young McClure, who happened to be at the resort had never seen the sailor before, but decided that with all that money he had better go to a hotel where he would be safe. He volunteered to drive him back to town, and the sailor consented.

This enraged the stove repair man, and he cursed McClure for a

ITEM VII

I hereby constitute and appoint my sister, Miss Ada Harshaw, Executrix of this my last Will and Testament; I expressly relieve her from making return to any court; from giving bond; and from rendering appraisal of my estate. It is my will that she own and possess the part of my estate hereinbefore devised to her and to possess same without other formality in the administration of my estate than the probate of this my will. It shall not be necessary for her to secure orders of any kind or nature whatever from any court in the premises.

Meddler. Then when the latter paid no attention, he reached to the floor of his car, came up with a rifle, and fired point blank at McClure's head.

McClure's wound was dressed in Murphy, and the sailor, staggered about town, finally was locked up for drunkenness. Held overnight he was let off with the costs by Magistrate Reese, and left shortly thereafter for Alabama.

Police here believe the stove repair man probably planned to rob the sailor—and if he resisted, as would have been likely, to kill him and hide his body in the woods.
