

Foxy Farmer

D. W. Kolk, a ranger in McCurtain County, Oklahoma, tells us of one farmer's unique method of safeguarding his quail during the last hunting season. "At the beginning of the season," Kolk informs "this farmer simply lured all the quail on his farm into a trap, kept them well hidden and well fed during the shooting season, granted entrance to all who desired to hunt on his land, and when the season closed, turned the well-fattened birds out upon his broad acres once more!"

Lose a Hook—Save a Life

It is a hard matter to release a fish so skillfully that it will not die later. Once the tender, slimy outer covering is injured, the fish dies. He may look frisky as a colt when you let him go—but an unbelievably high percentage of the fish you handle die later.

Cut your snell or leader and release the fish with hook in him. You only lose a hook which can be bought for a nickle a dozen, and two or three inches of line. The hook will gradually disintegrate inside the fish with no ill effects.

Swallow-Proof Catfish Hook

"Anything that would keep an old cat from swallowing a hook so deep you have to tussle half an hour to get it out would be a boom to civilization!" That's the way most Southern fishermen feel. Make a guard wire. Loop a piece of stiff wire through the eye of your hook. Twist the wire around the hook shank and bring both ends out straight to the sides. If a cat is big enough to swallow wire and all, he'd be old and tough and no one would believe he was that big anyway!

Detour—Quail Nest Ahead

A mother quail and her nest of twenty-one eggs recently caused travelers to do a bit of detouring between Bracketville in Kinney county and Rock Springs in Edwards county, Texas. The state highway department's crew of engineers and construction gang in building a road between those two communities, located a quail nest. All traffic was detoured around that spot until mama quail hatched nineteen of her twenty-one eggs and the little birds were able to leave the nest.

Tough, Eh!

The lady of the house heard a knock at her door. Looking through the screen she saw a Chinese fish peddler. Not wishing to be disturbed, she called to her maid: "You go, Ella."

The Chinaman blinked his little eyes, thrust out his neck and sung out belligerently: "You go 'ella your-

Fish Have Lubrication Too

While we don't know whether fish "change oil" every thousand miles, we do know that, in order to enable a fish to glide easily along in the water, its body is covered with a slimy mucus which is being constantly poured out in large quantities by a special glands situated in the epidermis. This mucus makes the body of the fish slippery and also minimizes friction with the surrounding water.

A Flying Squirrel?

There is no such thing as a flying squirrel. They can glide downward, but can't rise. With the exception of bats, no North American mammal is capable of sustained flight. In the squirrel that glides there is an extension of skin on both sides of its body extending from the front to the hind feet. When it leaps with its feet spread out, this membrane of skin is extended, forming a flat surface which enables it to glide diagonally downward from one limb to another.
