INSTALLMENT 2 THE STORY SO FAR:

THE STORY SO FAR: Dusty King and Lew Gordon were joint owners of the vast King-Gordon range which stretched from Texas to Montana. When building up this string of ranches, they coa-tinually had to fight the unscrupulous Ben Thorpe. Thorpe rivaled King-Gordon in pow-er and wealth, but he had gained his posi-tion through wholesale cattle rustling and gunplay. Their opposing interests came to a showdown when the Government announced the auctioning of the Crying Wolf land in Montana. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, had inspected this terrilory and found it to horizana. Bin Roper, King's adopted son, had inspected this territory and found it to contain an almost unbelievable wealth of grass. Bidding went high at the auction, but King beat out Thorpe to gain control of the land. This was a heavy blow to Thorpe who needed the pasture for his herds.

CHAPTER II

An hour spent in the Wells Fargo office with the deputy commissioner, filling out forms, signing papers, ended as Dusty King and Bill Roper stood with Lew Gordon on the board walk. until Ben Thorpe is bust," Dusty said. "What law enforcement we got in the West is rotten through and through with office holders that Thorpe owns."

"Some day," Gordon said slowly, "Ben Thorpe has got to go." "Some day? Lew, we've got him beat!"

King's exuberant mood of victory as not to be dampened. "You want was not to be dampened. "You want law and order?" he chortled. "We'll show 'em law and order!"

"That puts me in mind," said Gor-don. "A feller passed me this here to give to you." He handed Dusty King a little twisted scrap of paper, torn off the torn off the corner of something else. Dusty untangled it, looked at it a moment, showed it to the others. Five words were penciled on it in sprawling black letters:

IN GOD'S NAME LOOK OUT

"Who's this from, Lew?"

Gordon's lips moved almost soundlessly. "Dry Camp Pierce."

Roper knew that name, without knowing what lengths of outlawry had brought Dry Camp Pierce to where he was today. Rewards backed by Ben Thorpe were on Dry Camp's scalp over half the West; probably it was as much as his life was worth to show himself in Ogallala now.

"This note-"

Dusty King tossed it off with a shrug. "Oh-I suppose Thorpe is getting drunk some place and spout-ing off about what all he's going to do to me when he catches up." Dusty's teeth showed in his infec-tious grin. "I suppose Dry Camp thought I ought to know about it."

"He's right Dusty," Lew Gordon said. "We do want to look out, all of us, all the time." "We always had to look out,"

Dusty scoffed.

"It'll be the more so now. There isn't anything in the world Ben Thorpe's people will stop at, Dusty." "Let 'em come on."

"We want to look out," Gordon said again.

"If you feel that way about it," said Dusty, "what was the idea of your working through that law we can't wear guns in town?" Bill Roper said, "We could have fingers caught her wrist, and held her as easily as if he had dallied a calf to the horn. "Listen," he begged her. "Lis-ten_" brought it to an open shoot-out, five years ago-ten years ago. Better if we had " we had. Gordon shook his head. "Noth-ing ever gets fixed up with guns." ten He caught her up, clamped an arm behind her head, and kissed her hard. Hard, and for a long Dusty King pulled his hat a little more on one side so that he could wink at Bill Roper unobserved. But time. So long as she was rigid in his he said, "He's partly right, Bill. Ben Thorpe isn't just one man any more. Walk Lasham—Cleve Tanner—any arms, fighting him, he held her; but when she stood limp, neither yielding nor resisting, his arms reone of a dozen others could step into his shoes. It's a whole rotten or-ganization has to be busted up." d, and Jody tore herself free. lashed out at him like a little laxed. She mustang, striking him across the mouth. Her face was white, all that 'Ben Thorpe downed, and they'll quit," Bill Roper thought. quick, irrepressible laughter "Ben Thorpe down and it's only begun," Dusty countered. "Get it gone, as for a moment she locked at him A trickle of blood ran from Bill Roper's lips, and made a crooked out of your head that you can fix anything up by downing Ben Thorpe. Not while this organization stands in one piece. Might be a good idea mark on his chin. Then she turned and fled. When she was gone Bill Roper stood still, sucking his cut lips. After a little while he went to the win-dow, instinctively turning to open for you to remember that, Bill, in anything happens." "Dusty," Bill said, "if ever they get you, by God, I'll get Ben Thorpe if it's the last-" space for his answers. He could remember Jody Gordon said Dusty. "You hear me? as a little tow-headed kid, before her "No. No. If they get me-you'll remember ber what I said. You remember as a little tow-neaded kid, before her hair had darkened into the elusive misty brown that it was now. Or as a colt-legged girl with scratches on her shins from riding bare-legged you're fighting a thing, and a big one; not just one man." His face crinkled in that familiar, contagious through the sage. Or as a peculiarly tempestuous, uncertain thing, nel-ther child nor woman. But this ther child nor woman. But this latest phase he couldn't understand at all.

He picked up his hat, and for a lit-tle while stood turning it in his hands. Then he threw it in the corner, and went searching through the bause the house.

Jody was in the tallest of the four foolish towers. From here you could see the town, and the slim, glitter-ing line of the railroad, connecting these far plainsmen with a world hungry for beef.

Jody said matter-of-factly, "We've got to have more loading pens, Bill." Bill's face broke into a slow grin. Abruptly he laid hard hands on dis-used sashes, and broke them open. Into their little cubicle flowed the into their little cubicle howed the sweet air of the open prairie sweep, inspiriting with the fresh smell of the new grass. She said, "Tell me about your new job.'

"It isn't new."

"They said that you'd be the new oss of the Crying Wolf, if we got boss it," Jody said.

"I don't know as I'm so much in-terested as I was," he said.

"Why, Billy-not interested in the Crying Wolf-nearly five hundred square miles of feeder land! What's come over you?"

"I guess maybe I'm tired of rid-ing alone," Bill said.

"Alone? Bill said. "Alone? Bill said. have—I wouldn't call it alone." "I would. Grass country is lonely country." he said now, "as lonely coun Then some night you know you don't care what they add up to; and you think, 'Damn fat beef!' " "Why, Billy—why, Billy—"

"None of it means a damn, with-out you're there," he told her. "Working cattle doesn't mean anything, because you'll always have all the cattle you need anyway; and no long trail means anything, with-out you're at the end of it. I'm sick of long drive-trails, empty of you at the end."

There was a long, motionless si-lence; he kept his eyes on the far sand hills as presently she leaned forward to look up into his face. "You really mean it, don't you?"

Jody said. Jody's words came very faint, and a little breathless. "Why didn't you say so before?" He looked at her then, and she wasn't laughing. In her eyes was a new, grave light, such as he had never seen; a warm light, a beloved light, better than sunset to a weary day-rider who has worked leather day-rider who has worked leather since before dawn. Timorously, but very willingly, she came into his arms; and he held her as if she were not only a very precious but a very fragile thing. For a little while it seemed that one trail, a trail longer than the Long Trail itself, had come to its end to its end.

"Can't believe," he said at last, his lips in her hair, "you're sure-enough mine." "All yours—all, all!"

They had one hour, there in the prairie lookout tower, discovering each other, getting acquainted as if for the first time. The sun went down in a gorgeous welter of color. Jody shivered a little. "I wish Dad and Dusty would come. Espe-cially Dusty." "Why?"

"He has so many enemies. Some of them are dangerous as diamondbacks. It worries me when he's due and doesn't get back."

"Dusty'll take care of himself." Bill Roper chuckled, and held her closer. One half hour more . .

Up from the town came a crazily ridden horse, splashing mud eaves-high under the urge of spur and quirt.

"He'll lame his pony if he goes down in that slick," Bill commented. 'Now what do you suppose-The rider tried to pull up in front of the house, and the frantic pony swerved and slid, mouth wide open to the sky. Its shoulder crashed the fence, taking down a dozen feet of pickets. The rider tumbled off, ran up the steps to hammer on the door. Roper went clattering down the stairs, pulled open the door. "Now listen, you-"

PAUL PREACHES FAITH IN CHRIST

LESSON TEXT-Romans 3:21-31; 5:1, 2. GOLDEN TEXT-As it is written. The just shall live by faith.-Romans 1:17.

Justification by faith is a doctrine which lies at the very heart of the gospel. It provides the answer to man's age-old question, "What must I do to be saved?" (Acts 16:30).

"This was a question with which Paul had himself grappled, and for years he had sought salvation in the traditional Jewish way. Then one day he met Christ and he under-went a spiritual transformation through faith in Him, apart from the works of the law. Because of that works of the law. Because of that experience, and because of the divine revelations made to him, he was able to show others how to be saved and now to live a life of vic-tory." (Olmstead).

I. How Can God Be Just and Justify Sinners? (Rom. 3:21-31).

The portion of Romans just preceding our lesson is devoted to a devastating treatment of man's sinfulness, bringing him face to face with the question, "What can I do about it?" The answer has a hope-less ring to it.

 Man has no righteousness of his own, and cannot by any of his own works save himself. "He has tried many ways, in every age, but no human being, or groups of men or women, have ever devised any or women, have ever devised any scheme, have ever conceived of any ritual, have ever established any reritual, have ever established any re-ligion by their own efforts, through which peace with God has been found." (Wilbur M. Smith). 2. Christ paid the penalty for man's sin by His own blood. How clearly verse 25 declares the sacri-call death of Christ to provide a ficial death of Christ to provide a covering of blood (the real meaning covering of blood (the real meaning of "propitiation") which will enable a just God to forgive the sinner that believes in Christ (v. 22). Why not receive it in all its grace and power, not trying to explain it away or to evade its requirements? Why attempt to provide some other means of salvation when we know that "without the shedding of blood is no remission" of sin (Heb. 9:22)?

no remission" of sin (Heb. 9:22)? 3. Man receives salvation by grace through faith, apart from works. Man can only be "justified freely by his grace" (v. 24). It is for "them that believe" (v. 22), it is "through faith" (vv. 25, 26) and, note with care, "man is justified by faith apart from the works of the faith apart from the works of the law" (v. 28). Thus God establishes the law (v. 31) and yet becomes the righteous justifier of a repentant believing sinner. II. What Happens When a Man Is Justified? (Rom. 5:1, 2).

These verses sound like the uplift-ing music of a mighty organ, with the celestial choirs joining in to sing. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have" — What? Oh many pre-cious possessions, three of which are here mentioned. 1. "Peace With God."

"Through our Lord Jesus Christ" the barrier of sin with all its mali-cious enmity has been broken down clous entrity has been broken down and the believer is at peace with God. What could be more wonder-ful than thus to be really "in tune with the Infinite"? That is somewith the infinite 7 That is some-thing, by the way, which can only be true of the believer, one who has both peace with God and the peace of God flooding his soul. Every sin-

2. Standing in Grace.

"To stand in grace is to occupy the position wherein love is able to carry out its desires. To stand in grace is to come into such relationship with the Lord that He may do that thing that is in His heart, the thing which His love prompts. To stand in favor is to be unafraid. It is to be able to pass into the presence of One of whom we are unafraid, and know that there will be welcome." (G. Campbell Morgan).

3. Rejoicing in Hope.
