U. S. Industrial 'Guns' Draw Bead on Axis

BY RICHARD WRIGHT
WASHINGTON (Special)— America in the decisive year of 1942 is determined to outproduce the world.

President Roosevelt set this goal in his message to Congress on the State of the Union—60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks, 20,000 anti-aircraft guns, 8,000,000 tons of merchant vessels.

Achievement of the production goal is promised in statements of many key business leaders.

To the automobile industry, has fallen the task of out-producing the enemy in tanks, guns, planes, motors and even artillery shells.

Unmatched throughout the world as a producer of cars and trucks, the industry has been called upon to act with driving haste in gearing itself to the production of vital war materials.

At the beginning of 1942 the government has placed approximately $4,000,000,000 of war contracts with motor car manufacturers—a clear implication, in the words of J. W. Frazer, president of Willys - Overland Motors, Inc., that America regards the industry as the keystone of the arsenal of democracy. His company, incidentally, designed and is producing thousands of those little quarter-ton trucks, affectionately called "jeeps" by the troops.

While the auto-makers will be increasingly occupied during the year fabricating war machines, the airplane builders are scheduled to turn out more aircraft than any other nation, and more than the combined output of many Axis-controlled countries. The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce estimates that during 1941 plane production reached $1,500,000,000, an increase of almost one billion over 1940.

An important goal already achieved in the country's all-out war effort is production by the Aluminum Company of America at a rate several times that of 1938, last full peacetime year. In 1942 completion of plants now under construction will lift America's aluminum output to a level well above that of all Axis countries. Most of Alcoa's $215,000,000 self-financed expansion program has already been completed, according to Roy A. Hunt, president, and the fruits of this labor are even now making possible tremendous increases in production of aircraft and other vital machines of war.

On another front, the speed with which we achieve final victory will be accelerated by the nation's ability to supply the foods essential to national health, in the opinion of John A. Hartford, president of Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company. This means that food distributors, says Mr. Hartford, have a grave responsibility to redouble their efforts to reduce the cost of moving merchandise from producer to consumer.

"Agriculture," he points out, "is prepared to produce a greater quantity of foodstuffs than ever; and I am confident that all distributors will cooperate with farmers all over the country to assure orderly marketing of produce, to eliminate spoilage, and waste motion."

Not all products are going to be produced in greater volume this year.

Rubber tires, for example, have been rationed. Consequently, the first major job assigned to America's war-time citizenry is conservation of rubber. What can be accomplished is emphasized by John L. Collyer, president of B. F. Goodrich company, who states that, "if each of America's 30,000,000 motorists would see to it that he gets 10 per cent more mileage out of his present tires, the annual requirement of rubber for cars and trucks alone could be reduced as much as 30,000 tons."

Meanwhile, steps are being taken to augment our rubber sources in this hemisphere, says Mr. Collyer, whose company 18 months ago offered the public the first tire of synthetic rubber.

Industry's ingenuity is typified by the achievement of the distillers. Last year few guessed that a serious bottleneck in munitions might be averted because of the ability of this industry to make ethyl alcohol for smokeless powder. Yet, according to L. S. Rosentiel, chairman of Schenley Distillers corporation, the industry is already producing about 93,000,000 proof gallons of ethyl alcohol. Also, he reports, the alcoholic beverage industry is the largest industrial tax source, pouring one billion dollars annually into the federal treasury.

Thus, briefly, expressions of industrial leaders of the nation reflect confidence that Americans have the knowledge, ability and courage to fight to ultimate victory, to win the battles on the industrial fronts, and more important, to win the peace after the fighting is over.

U. S. Bans Expansions Of Phone Equipments

The War Production Board has limited future expansion of telephone equipment and service. The order will affect Southern Bell's operations in this area, Manager W. L. Lampkin said today, but does not apply to expansion now in progress. Mr. Lampkin added:

"We will comply with the order by doing our utmost in every respect to achieve the desired results in saving materials. We will endeavor to administer the order as equitably as possible and with the least inconvenience to the public.

"All types of instruments and services will not be available as heretofore. The public, however, has always cooperated in getting the best possible service out of the available facilities, and a continuation of the cooperation will be doubly helpful in these times."

nation of our decision. We wrote him a complete history of the case. Then the major wrote demanding that we send him all the papers and data so that he could study and make his own decision. We refused to do it and meanwhile, the man was ordered to report Tuesday, to go to camp.

"Instead of the man showing up, there came this telegram from Major Upton.

"Well, if the Major is going to run the draft in Cherokee County, there is no sense in our wasting our time on a thankless job; so we'll just quit. And we have written him just that."
