Those Wanting Pressure Canners Should File An Application Now

While no definite information has been received by local county and farm agents relative to pressure canners, applications are being accepted at the AAA Office in the courthouse. Everyone who desires to purchase a pressure canner should file application as soon as possible, so that the committee may pass on them and be prepared to issue certificates when they are available.

Murphy Hardware Co. in Murphy and Brown Hardware Co. in Andrews have been asked to distribute the cookers, but they do not yet have them in stock.

Motor Club Asks The Appointment Of Gas Director

Urging the appointment of a gasoline director to have supervision over the distribution and production of gasoline, and requesting the Attorney General of the United States to take action to determine if certain parties are guilty of treason, is the latest move in the efforts of the Carolina Motor Club to bring justice and equal rights to the people of the Carolinas and the Southeastern States, according to a statement issued today by Coleman W. Roberts, president of that organization.

Attorney General Francis Biddle has been urged to look into the acts of treason which the Motor Club president claims to have been committed, and are now being committed throughout the Carolinas by the consumption of critical war materials such as tires, trucks, gasoline, and manpower, in hauling gasoline back and forth across the State in order to earn additional transportation revenue or collect Government subsidies.

The Carolina Motor Club president has likewise suggested to Stabilization Director, James F. Byrnes, that the only solution to this problem can come from the appointment of a Director of Gasoline just as we now have a Director of Rubber. "The middle is so dirty that it smells to the high heavens and something needs to be done about it," said Mr. Roberts.

Gasoline is being transported back and forth across the Carolinas, and in some instances war bills are being taken to the Ports of Charleston and Wilmington, by automobile, and there new bills are made and brought back, and transportation charges are collected for the hauling of gas that has never been hauled.

"The people of the Carolinas and Southeastern States have long suffered this discrimination with patience, but now when we learn the gas is available, or would be available under proper distribution methods, they are up in arms and are demanding that something be done about it."

The Carolina Motor Club is simply furnishing the information to the government and urging that an investigation be made with private citizens as a part of the investigating body, so that we may know the truth about the whole situation and not depend entirely upon the petroleum officials to furnish the information or upon government departments to make the investigation.

People throughout the two Carolinas are giving us their wholehearted cooperation. Our mails are flooded with letters of encouragement, letters giving us specific and additional information concerning the wastefulness of the method of distribution of gasoline within the Carolinas.

Members of Congress from North and South Carolina are likewise receiving their share of protests and requests that they do something about it, or urging an investigation and the possible appointment of a Gasoline Director.

Pvt. Leonard Stiles, who has been stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C. since November 31, 1942, spent Mother's day and his first wedding anniversary with his wife at Gainesville, Ga., and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Stiles, of Murphy.

Stabilization Of Employment Is Announced

A plan for stabilization of employment in North Carolina was announced Saturday by Dr. J. S. Dorton, state director of the War Manpower Commission.

The new stabilization plan became effective at 12:01 o'clock Saturday morning.

"The purpose of the plan is to provide government, management, and labor with an effective system of providing workers where needed to do war production and essential civilian work," Dr. Dorton said. "The plan provides for holding workers on their jobs where needed or permitting them to transfer to other jobs under certain conditions."

"So long as employers and workers conform to provisions of the plan they will be in compliance with regulation 4 of the War Manpower Commission restricting the transfer of workers which was issued under the President's 'Hold the Line' order stabilizing wages, prices and employment."

PIGS

On January 1, 1942 there were 60,377,000 hogs on U. S. farms. It is estimated that the 1943 pig crop may total 125,000,000 as compared with 105,000,000 last year. Some body better grow some extra feed.

Ten to 15 per cent of Georgia's 1942 bumper crop of cotton was picked by volunteer city folks.

"Many parents have not kept up with the changes that have taken place in our schools in the past few years," stated E. S. Christenbury, TVA principal education director of this district, in an address before the Murphy Woman's club Wednesday afternoon in the home economics building. "Many parents and many teachers still conceive the school as a place where the child sits at his desk for about six hours a day reading, writing, and doing number work. Many feel that a school that provides only this training for their children is doing a satisfactory job," he continued.

"There are two philosophies of education being realized in our school systems in North Carolina today. The one philosophy lends itself to what we call the subject matter centered school, which, incidentally, was what you women had for the most part when you attended school. Children attending this type spend the day working independently, writing, reading and figuring, with all the responsibility for their direction being dictated by the teachers."

"In the other school a far different philosophy prevails. In this type what is known as a child-centered program of education exists: education for living. The needs and interests and abilities of the children determine the school program. The children are encouraged to begin solving everyday life problems at an early age. The program seeks to develop the child socially, emotionally, physically, normally and spiritually. We recognize the fact that the only sound philosophy and background upon which to build an education is a spiritual one."

"The major objective of the school of the latter type is to do everything in its power to see that every child develops into a well-rounded, well-balanced human being. It has three major objectives: academic skills must be developed; the program will provide opportunities for the child to learn to work in groups, developing leadership and followership ability and to live democratically; and the creative ability of every student must be given opportunity to develop."

Mr. Christenbury was introduced by Miss Dora Ruth Parks, regional librarian. Mrs. Harry Miller presided and made announcements. Mrs. T. A. Case reported on Red Cross work. She stated that if sufficient interest is manifested in first aid and nutrition courses the chapter will sponsor.

Following Mr. Christenbury's speech, Mrs. Pauline Stalcup, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Nell Stiles, sang "In May-Time."

Mrs. Miller and Mrs. H. Bueck served lime ice, cake and coffee at the close of the program.
