

How To Get Larger Fall Egg Production

Putting pullets in summer range shelters on soybeans or lespedeza and vaccinations for chicken pox are two of the best practices that can be carried out at this time for increasing egg production in the fall when egg prices are usually relatively high.

T. T. Brown, Extension poultryman at State College, suggests plenty of feeders and waterers, and also adequate shade, for the pullets while on range.

Plans for building an outdoor, covered type of feeder may be obtained from the county agent or by writing the Agricultural Editor, State College, Raleigh, for a free copy of War Series Bulletin No. 5, entitled "Equipment for Poultry". The county agent can also provide plans for a range shelter that is easy to build and economical as cost.

"As the chicks get larger, be sure to increase the feeder space," Brown says. "Entirely too many growers are providing too little feeder space as the pullets develop. Green feed and plenty of mash at all times keep the pullets developing rapidly, which is just what is needed for early production of eggs.

"Keep mash in the feeders and, late in the afternoon, feed all the grain the pullets will eat. In addition, many poultrymen prefer to keep a hopper of whole oats available at all times. Plenty of feeder and waterer space will not only give much quicker growth but will also reduce the number of runs and culls materially.

"Pullets should be kept on range that has not been used by chickens or received poultry manure for two years. If the field is sloping, put the range shelter at the foot of the slope and move it up the hill a short distance every 3 to 4 weeks."

HINTS FOR Farm Homemakers

By RUTH CURRENT
N. C. State College

Home demonstration specialists of the State College Extension Service, studying time and motion, have agreed on the following six principles to speed production on the home assembly line.

Leave out any part of the task you can. For example, in dish-washing scald dishes with boiling water and leave on rack to dry instead of wiping dry. Choose recipes requiring less time and fewer utensils.

Make both hands work. It pays to learn to use both hands at the same time instead of overworking the right hand. Such jobs as putting away dishes, setting the table and dusting can be done by both hands at once.

Keep everything in easy reach. Wasted steps mean wasted time and energy. Keep the coffee pot, coffee and measuring spoon or cup at the place where coffee is made, and the bread box and toaster side by side. Group ironing equipment—iron, clothes rack, hangers, and basket—as near the ironing board as possible.

Use the best tool for the task. For example use tongs to remove jars and glasses from hot rinse water, and to take baked potatoes from the oven. A long-handled dustpan prevents stooping and saves time.

Sit at work whenever you can. Tired backs and feet slow up work. Much ironing can be done as well sitting as standing. A lap table saves effort in preparing vegetables for cooking and canning.

If the iron sticks during ironing, rub it on a little salt sprinkled on paper or smooth lightly with
