The Murphy P. T. A. Welfare Committee states clothing needs closely connected with the truancy problem in Murphy school is the winter clothing needs of some of the children. The P. T. A. asks the public to help meet these needs by contributing any of the following: Twelve girl's coats, size 8-12; five boy's coats or jackets, size 12-14; six dozen shirts and overalls, size 10; eight pairs shoes, large size 6-8; six pairs girl's shoes, size 10½ to 3½; two dozen girl's dresses, size 8-12; two dozen pairs socks, children's size 8-12; two dozen suits underwear, size 8-12; one dozen caps, and two dozen sweaters, size 8-12.

The P. T. A. hopes to investigate these cases of need so that as far as possible real needs are met. It is not the wish of the Welfare committee to encourage anyone to depend on charity. It is real Americanism to see that every child in the town and county attends school. Many of the needy ones are deserving.

The Missionary Societies of the various churches in this community are asked to cooperate with the P. T. A. to help meet these needs and help all children to be in school. Anyone who has any clothing to give is asked to contact Mrs. Harry Miller, Mrs. Myron Jenson, Mrs. E. C. Van Horn, or Mrs. Clae Moore who are members of the welfare committee.

Murphy-Hayesville To Meet Friday In Homecoming Tilt

By PORTER GRIGGS

The Murphy Bulldogs, undefeated in Western Conference play will risk their perfect record against the Hayesville Yellow Jackets here in their annual homecoming battle Friday at 1:00 p. m. This is their final home game of the season.

The weather and injuries have forced the Bulldogs to take it light so far this week, but Coach Yow has been drilling the Murphy eleven on the tricky ground assault the Yellow Jackets have been using, while polishing upon his own offense as well.

A victory over the Hayesville eleven would give the Bulldogs a good chance of topping the conference championship as the Bulldogs have only Andrews left, and have topped the wildcats once this season. A victory, also would give the Bulldogs a perfect homecoming day.

1947 Community Book Week Project To Aid Children In U. S. And Overseas

The 28th National Observance of Children's Book Week is being celebrated this week, November 16-22. The slogan around which libraries, schools and civic organizations are planning their annual programs is "Books for the World of Tomorrow."

The poster, shown above, has been designed by the noted illustrators of children's books, Ingrid and Edgar Parin D'Aulaire. It depicts the many generations of American children who have been privileged to inherit an ever-increasing wealth of books written, designed and published solely for their delight and entertainment. Books like these can prepare them to be intelligent, tolerant and cooperative citizens in the world of tomorrow.

To activate this slogan, the Children's Book Council, 62 West 45th Street, New York City, which is also national Headquarters for Book Week information and aids, has initiated a special Book Week project for 1947. The Council tells us that at least eleven million American boys and girls are without access to library service or reading of any kind other than text books. This is a shocking fact, coupled with the knowledge that the United States is also the home of the greatest children's book industry in the world. The Council has therefore enlisted the help of two of its twenty-nine cooperating organizations, The Save the Children Federation and the Treasure Chest Campaign to put on the Treasure Chests U.S.A. program. This program was opened on October first to encourage more fortunate communities to donate Treasure Chests of children's books to rural schools in the United States (25,000 Treasure Chest books have already been donated and shipped to children overseas).

In its free manual which outlines this project, the Council says "State Extension services, bookmobiles and individual teachers have done much with limited funds to correct these conditions. It is hoped that Federal aid will soon release more help to these young citizens in our disadvantaged areas, but until that time comes we can all help to share the great wealth of American children's books with our own brothers and sisters in this new and easy way."

Among the many countries who have received chests to date are the Philippines, China, France, Belgium, Greece, Poland, Russia and Siam. Chests can now be shipped to former enemy countries and have been received already in Japan, Germany and Austria. The Treasure Chest Campaign, though still an independent unit, is now working in cooperation with UNESCO.
