Points Given On Washing Rayon

By RUTH CURRENT

State Home Demonstration Agent Home economists say there is an element of chance in washing rayon if the label carries no facts about its washability, or if the sales clerk was not too specific in giving such information. Never let your rayons become extremely soiled and never soak or boil them. Unless specifically labeled for "all-purpose" soap, use a mild soap on rayons. When there is a "go-ahead" signal for washability, very little pampering is necessary. You may, of course, wash it by hand. But if the seams are well-finished and well tailored then there is no reason for not machine-washing it. Warm water about 105 to 110 degrees F. is very effective as most rayons clean easily.

Rayons require a relatively short washing period — 2 to 4 minutes is sufficient — for protection of the fiber which is weaker when wet. Short periods are usually effective for filament rayons because their fiber tends to resist soil and cleans easily. The washing action of the washer must be gentle. Rinse rayons thoroughly but speedily. Avoid unnecessary wringer wrinkles. Never wring by hands or twist. If washing by hand, press water out between a towel.

Unlike cotton clothes which are allowed to dry completely and are then redampened, rayons, particularly dresses and blouses, are ironed best when they are allowed to dry only until partially damp for ironing. Don't make the mistake of trying to iron your rayons too damp. You will waste time and may stretch or distort the fabric.

If you want to stretch that food dollar, plan carefully the three meals a day. Plan at least three meals at a time and be sure to include all of the things you need for good nutrition.

Compare your menus from day to day for variety and balance in meals.

Thousands Expected To Enter Contest

Thousands of white high school students from throughout the State are expected to participate in the 1949 agricultural speaking contest sponsored by the North Carolina Bankers Association, says J. Frank Doggett, Extension soil conservationist at State College.

Several thousand dollars worth of government savings bonds and cash prizes will be awarded to school, county, district, and State winners in the contest, which is designed to stimulate interest in proper land use and treatment.

In a statement this week, John P. Stedman of Lumberton, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Bankers Association, said:

"The agricultural committee of the North Carolina Bankers Association has for many years centered its interest around the protection of the soil of North Carolina, which is the State's most valuable asset. We, as bankers, realize that the prosperity of our people will rise or fall in proportion to the care or lack of care and treatment that the majority of the State's population, who produce a livelihood from the land, give to it.

"Approximately 72 per cent of all North Carolinians live in or produce from the country-side. For that reason, the strongest efforts are needed on the part of business and industry to foster an effective educational program for proper land use and care. It takes a long time to develop good land, but carelessness and neglect can cause it to lose its value overnight.

"Again this year the Bankers Association, assisted by soil conservationists, Extension Service personnel, foresters, and other agencies, takes pleasure in sponsoring a speaking contest covering some phase of soil conservation."

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Adams, Asheville, spent last week-end with Mr. Adams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Zala Adams.

Miss Mattie Bates left Thursday of last week for her home in Boynton Beach, Fla. She was accompanied to Candler Field, Atlanta, Ga., by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hay and Children, Robert and Ardith.

INFANT DIES

Funeral services for Barbara Helen Green, 11-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert R. Green of Murphy, Route 2, who died Friday at the home of her grandmother in Union county, Ga., were held Saturday at 3 p. m. in the home.

The Rev. Fred Stiles officiated. Burial followed in Whitmore cemetery at Bellview, with Ivie funeral home in charge.

Surviving besides the parents are three sisters, Bernice, Joyce, and Brenda, and a brother, Charles Earl, all of Murphy Route 2.

The system of soil classification developed through years of research makes it possible to apply techniques of modern agricultural science to individual farms.
