General Jonathan M. Wainwright, the hero of Bataan, has accepted the invitation of the Cleveland (Tennessee) Bear, Deer and Boar Hunters' Club to go on its biggest wild boar, bear and deer hunt Nov. 16-22.

President M. H. Thompson of the club has announced that the hunt, in which 60 hunters will participate, will be held in the Santeetlah area near the North Carolina-Tennessee border in the Nantahala National Forest. The governors of the two states and other notables have also been invited on the big hunt, which is being set up with the finest bear dogs and guides in the Great Smokies. Three of the dogs, Thompson said, were in on the kills of 19 bears last year.

The rugged Santeetlah country is estimated to contain upward of 500 Russian wild boars, descendants of tuskers imported in 1910 to stock a private game preserve. They now range the National forest lands, and may be hunted only in expeditions carefully supervised by the National Forest Service and the State Game Service.
