Although Cherokee County is a dairy county with much milk produced, indications are that milk is not being used in quantities needed by Cherokee County people, concludes Miss Nina Lee Corbett, nutritionist with the State Board of Health who has been working here for the past five weeks.

The county people also are low in the use of green, leafy and yellow vegetables, lean meat, citrus fruits, or tomatoes and raw cabbage. These are essential in well-balanced diets.

Although the people do not eat a sufficient amount of green leafy and yellow vegetables, they do get potatoes, green beans, and typical other vegetables. "The indications are," says Miss Corbett, "we are exceedingly low in our citrus fruit, tomatoes and raw cabbage, a daily source of Vitamin C," she points out. "We do not use enough tossed salads, and the use of lean meat is much lower than was anticipated."

Miss Corbett went on to say that this being a winter month might account for the type of food consumed, and probably at some other seasons the meals would be better balanced. "Apparently Western North Carolina counties are very low in their eating and, therefore, do not get as good a diet as they should at all times. Provision should be made for the last winter months, and canned and frozen foods used to plan proper diets, so as to use the daily requirements."

She has studied existing conditions in the Cherokee County school unit to find out what the needs are in the schools. As a result of this study, special nutrition courses have been given to the teachers in the unit. This course will serve as a basis for health teaching in the schools. Many will plan a nutrition unit, some using experimental animals such as white rats or guinea pigs. The party unit method will be used for the lower grades. This method of teaching has proven successful and schools using it are making great strides. "Now we are thinking of the whole child—body, mind, and spirit," Miss Corbett says.

This study has been made in only one unit of the county schools and plans are made to conduct this type of work in the other units, later which will give a more complete picture of the total county need.

Murphy To Vote On Legal Beer Today

Polls To Open At 6:30 A. M.

Today (Thursday) Murphy citizens will go to the polls at court house and decide whether the sale of beer will be legalized within the town limits.

Polls will be open from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. Election judges are Hayes Dockery, D. M. Reese and Mrs. Beryl W. A.

Some 1,200 residents are registered and heavy balloting is expected. Both sides predict victory.

Murphy voters rejected legal beer sales by a four-to-one margin in 1948.

Today's election was called by the town board after Johnson circulated a petition signed by 300 people. The board found that almost 150 of the signers were registered voters residing in Murphy. However, only 143 signatures, 75 per cent of the voters registered for the 1950 town election, were required.

MISS ADA MAY MARSHALL

4-H Club Girls To Hear Fashion Talk By Specialist

Miss Ada May Marshall, 4-H Club stylist, declares that no girl wants to strike out when it comes to planning her Spring and Summer wardrobe. To justify her point, she will present "Fashion at the Bat for the 4-H Modern Miss" on February 21, 2:00 at courtroom, Murphy Courthouse.

Fashions that will be shown will include trim little suits to wear to the season's first baseball game. Among these is a fly-away bolero or a fitted jacket teamed with a full or moderately flared skirt to suit a variety of tastes. Warm weather specials to be highlighted will be bright yellow denim separates for play—pedal pushers beach jacket, shorts, bodice top and skirt.

Pretty party clothes reserved for non-athletic moments are shown in a strapless formal in rustling taffeta or a red and white print street length dress with little puffed sleeves and scooped neckline.

Emphasis will be on fashions that are easy to make for beginners in sewing. Neat fabrics used in this fashion show will be of interest to all.

Miss Marshall is a former 4-H Club member from New York State, and received her B. S. degree from the College of Home Economics at Syracuse University with a major in Merchandising and Fashion Design.

Arrangements to have Miss Marshall in Murphy were made by County Home Agents.

The models who will appear are 4-H members from Cherokee and Clay Counties. All 4-H members, H-D members, leaders, and interested people are invited to attend.
