Mrs. Ruth Sursavage Is Journal Editor

Mrs. Ruth Sursavage this week becomes the editor of The Andrews Journal, replacing Mrs. Zora Belle Bryson, who will be working full time in the office of The Cherokee Scout in Murphy. Mrs. Sursavage has had considerable journalistic experience having reported for a number of years for news papers, including the Asheville Citizen-Times. Mrs. Sursavage is well known in Andrews, having taught in the Andrews schools for the past three years. She is a member of the Andrews Presbyterian Church and of the Konnaheeta Woman's Club. Mrs. Sursavage is a former president of Bryson City. She was graduated from Mars Hill College and from the Woman's College, University of North Carolina, having received a B. S. degree from the latter university. She had held teaching positions in Lenoir; Newton Falls, Ohio, and Bryson City, prior to coming to Andrews. Mrs. Sursavage has three children, Katherine, 10, Joseph, Jr. (Butch), 5, and Jimmie, 3. The family has resided in Andrews since 1948. Mr. Sursavage is employed by Berkshire Knitting Mills. Mrs. Sursavage's phone number is Andrews 128-W, and anyone having news or advertising for the Journal should contact her.

Cows Get Their Own "Parlor" When Farmers Use Loose Housing Setup

Cows soon learn their way around a milking parlor-loafing barn setup. From the barn, upper left, cows pass into this combination parlor and milk house, lower left. When milking chores are over, they leave the building, returning to the loafing barn, as shown in the picture at upper right.

It's too bad cows can't talk. We should then know what they have to say about loafing barns and milking parlors. As it is, studies will have to speak for them. Under this method of handling dairy cattle, cows can roam at will in their loafing shed or barn, unhindered by stanchions. At milking time, they parade into a "parlor" to be milked. Stanchions in the milking structure often are on a raised platform to make the milking chore easier to perform. Loafing barns are cold, usually being open to the weather on one side. In one recent test, the temperature in the barn dipped to zero without causing any drop in milk production. What the minimum is, nobody seems to know, as yet. It is true, however, that warm barns are not suitable for loose housing, since bedding becomes soggy and wet. On the subject of the bedded area, experts say that 60 to 70 square feet per cow is satisfactory. Milking parlors, connected or adjacent to the loafing barn, normally are well insulated. Since they include the milk handling room, they can be as well equipped as the farmer desires. Some have conventional milking machines; others have facilities for piping the milk from the cow directly into milk cans, located in electric coolers. Running water and electric water heaters in the milk house will help keep milking utensils as spotlessly clean as the farmer wants them to be.

James Holloway Weds Miss Moore

Mrs. Kay Moore of Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., and A. N. James Holloway, formerly of Andrews, were married Sunday morning February 10, at Bixoni, Mrs. using the single ring ceremony. The bride wore a light blue suit with navy blue accessories and a yellow rose bud corsage. The attendants were A. N. and Mrs. Harold Dressendorfer of Pensacola, Fla. Mrs. Holloway is a graduate of Smithburg High School, class of 1929, and prior to her marriage was employed by the United Telephone Company of Blue Ridge Summit. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moore of Highfield, Md.

Mr. Holloway is a graduate of Andrews High School, class of 1929, and has been serving in the USN since October 1950. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Holloway of Blue Ridge Summit. Mr. and Mrs. Holloway and family are natives of Andrews.

The newly-weds will make their home in Pensacola, Fla., where Mr. Holloway is stationed at Corey Field.

The percentage of infected cattle discovered by official brucellosis tests continued to decline in the United States during the first six months of the fiscal year 1952, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Lions Sponsor All-Star Game

Andrews Lions Club sponsored an unusual basketball game at the Andrews gymnasium, Friday night. The Georgia Tech All-Stars, featuring members of the Orange Bowl football squad, turned their talents to the hardwood circuit, and gave a full house the opportunity to see brown in action, minus the shoulderpads and helmets. Playing against the big boys were three high school basketball coaches, Warren Deyermond, Ike Olsen and John Kupiec, and basketball players Jim Ed Hughes, of Murphy, and Floyd Teas of Andrews.

No one will question the fact that the local team put up a good fight and in spots it looked as though they might out-play the collegians. In fact, had it not been for Tech's basket expert, Templeton, the Andrews-Murphy stars could have been winners. The final score, Georgia Tech All-Stars, 44-Andrews-Murphy All-Stars, 39. Templeton was high for the visitors, while Jim F. Hughes led with 13 points for the home team and Floyd Teas chalked up 11 points.

The gym had a near capacity crowd. Proceeds from the game are to be used in the Lions Club work for the blind. In a preliminary game, the Nantahala girls defeated the Andrews girls 29 to 26.

HOW BIG A BITE of your tax bill?

SCORE THE PROOF

1951 FEDERAL INCOME TAX RETURN

Chances are, your federal income tax bill this year is the biggest ever. Yet, part of every tax dollar you pay will be used to build and maintain public transportation facilities for the free or less-than-cost use of privately-owned air, water and highway commercial carriers.

These huge inter-city transportation agencies have long since outgrown the "infant industry" stage. Why, then, must you go on paying part of their costs of doing business? And why must the self-supporting, tax-paying railroads be required, not only to compete with carriers subsidized from the public purse—but to help pay the costs of their subsidies, too?

America's taxpayers can no longer afford the luxury of an unrealistic national transportation policy. Its continued existence under present conditions adds to your taxes and threatens the strength and vitality of the one form of transportation all the others together cannot replace—the railroads!
