Turkeys Among Abundant Food

Abundant supplies of turkeys will be on hand for November food markets G. H. Farley county agent at the State College Extension Service said this week.

This year's record-breaking crop of turkeys gives them a top spot on the U. S. Department of Agriculture plentiful foods list for November. Mr. Farley explained.

Other foods on the November plentiful foods list are raisins, green fish, canned tuna, table grapes, figs, carrots, dry baby lima beans, tree nuts, salad oils, vegetable shortening and table fats, nonfat dry milk, cottage cheese, buttermilk and honey.

California chief source of fresh table grapes in November is harvesting a crop about a fourth larger than average. The state also has the largest carrot crop since the war years, Mr. Farley said.

The aggregate production of tree nuts is larger than the 1941-50 average though smaller than last year. Georgia, which grows most of the crop of improved varieties of pecans, has an estimated crop of 30,504,000 pounds, compared to 42,300,000 pounds last year and an average of 25,008,000 pounds.
