He began his career in air shows by acquiring a P-12 formerly owned by movie magnate Howard Hughes and used to make one of his movies. This ship was the only one of its kind, and the stubby little speedster quickly made Huntley famous throughout the show circuits.

The ship he flies, a Pitts Special 450 is also the only one in existence, and turns in a performance to please the most exacting fan. It is named "Sampson" after a nickname given by Huntley to one of his four children.

Appearing with Huntley for the first time will be Melvin Robinson of High Point, who will make two parachute jumps. Robinson is a professional "spot", jumper, and holds a position with a High Point paper concern.
