GARDEN TIME

BY ROBERT SCHMIDT
Some of you sweet corn growers may be looking forward to the satisfaction and joy that will be yours when you sink your teeth in the first tender ears. Perhaps the corn ear worms are also looking forward to that time — and they usually get there first. However, they can be effectively controlled with very little trouble.

For small gardens it is probably sufficient and easiest to dust the silks of the corn with 5 per cent DDT dust. The dust should be applied directly to the silks when about three-fourths of the silks are showing and again when a few of them begin to turn brown. The moth lays the eggs on the silks and when they hatch out, the small corn ear worm feeds there before he eats into the ear itself. For large plantings a power sprayer should be used and a DDT-mineral oil emulsion is recommended by our entomologists. This spray has been found to be very effective for the control of the ear worm.

With the advent of hot, dry weather we may expect to have trouble with red mites, commonly called "red spiders." These very small insects attack the undersides of the leaves of many flowers, vegetables and shrubs, sucking the plant juices and often killing the plants. If the leaves of tomatoes, beans, dahlias or other garden plants turn a brownish yellow color they should be closely examined for red mites. Red mites are very difficult to control. Malathion has been found to be effective but is toxic to human beings and should be used with care and strictly according to manufacturers' directions.

And while we are on the subject of insect control let us not forget the ever-present Mexican bean beetle. Don't let the beetles seriously damage the bean plants before you do something about it. As soon as you see some of the beetles — they are large brown or yellow lady bird beetles with sixteen spots on their wing covers — or as soon as you notice that some of the bean leaves have been eaten so that they resemble a piece of lace, it is time to get busy. The best control in the home garden is a 1% rotenone. Since the beetle feeds on the undersides of the bean leaves the dust must be applied to the undersides of the leaves to be effective. Rotenone is not toxic to humans and therefore may be used without danger even after the bean pods have formed.
