

Less Than Half Collected In Red Cross Drive

In its 1958 Red Cross drive Murphy has in hand only $900 of its $2,500 quota thus far. Joe Ray, drive chairman, announced Tuesday.

Increased effort is needed, he brought out, in order that the Murphy chapter attain its quota. Persons in rural sections are urged to send contributions to principals at their schools or to Mr. Ray. If any of the areas wish someone to help make solicitations, this aid can be provided. Mr. Ray said, if request is made.

The money raised thus far has come largely from business men and contributors in residential drives made by the Mothers' March.

Murphy's return to active participation in the Red Cross has been stimulated by the blood-lacks since the bloodmobile no longer includes Murphy as a visiting point. With the raising of its quota, Murphy and the central and western portions of the county will again have blood services; and will also contribute to the over-all disaster relief, life saving, first aid, and home-nursing program of the Red

Plains is planning to furnish three wagons with others coming from Madisonville, Sweetwater and Spring City, all in Tennessee. The journey will be approximately 60 miles.

In addition to the wagons, many will make the trip on horseback. Wagon train rules have been set up and all wagons and riders will be under the supervision of a wagon master.

Arrangements have been made for coverage by the Associated Press and the United Press and television stations. Look and Life magazines have also been contacted for coverage.

There is a blacktop from Tellico Plains to the state line, and there is a paved road leading out of Murphy, but it stops several miles short of the line. In between is a stretch of rough trail.

The road from Tellico Plains is the main one up through the Tellico Wildlife management area. It follows the banks of the Tellico River all the way to the state line. It runs through some of the wildest country in the Southeast, where the managed hunts are held each year for Russian wild boar, bear and deer. The section is one of the few frontier areas left in the nation, and the completed road to Murphy would open the semi-wilderness to the nation's traveling, vacationing public. Citizens of Tellico Plains and Murphy visualize another Gatlinburg as a possibility because of the natural wild beauty of the scenery, the mountain flowers and the white trout waters that come tumbling down through the rocky gorges.
