THOMAS C. CHRISTMAS, Pastor First Baptist Church Andrews, N. C.

LIVING WATER

"Everyone that drinketh of this water shall thirst again" . . . It is not difficult to find traces of this thirst in the faces of those whom we meet day by day. As we gaze upon the faces of the passing people, it is only now and again that we see a face which is indicative of peace.

We are confronted with an abounding unrest. Vocabulary to portray the condition is varied, to say the least: "unrest," "discontended," "dissatisfied."

Let us think of people who are victims of consuming thirst. There is the great army of men and women who are consumed by the fever of worry.

There is little calm about their life. They have no time of cool reflection. Their life is a fever from morning till night.

This fever, at times is the result of a chill. The wind of bad news can chill us in the midst of a feast. Subsequent worry issues in spiritual feverishness.

There are those who are dominated by the lust of bliss. "As the pitiable evasions. heart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O pleasure!" These souls are Master brings the gift of spiritual always thirsting after new sensations.

There are those who are scorched with the desire of casual passion. The soul imprisoned in a temple of cribable thirst.

There are those who hold the smoldering fire of dull indifference. They often call their restlessness by another name, but its proper name is spiritual thirst.

Finally, there are those who are burdened with the sense of sin, and who are possessed by a fervent longing for the living God.

How do men seek to relieve their thirst? They are weary in their worry; they are tired in their pleasures; they are sick in their passions. Too often resort is made to the "waters of the earth."

Many people try to allay a spiritual thirst by a carnal draught. Others attempt to realize satis.

faction and peace by immersing themselves in stimulants like the manifold pleasures of society. Yet they "thirst again."

Others plunge more deeply into business. They seek for more gold and yet the soul refuses to be appeased, and "thirst again."

Or we can give opiates to our disquieted and feverish souls. Many find satisfaction in referring to their intentions. But their satisfaction is only temporary. They are thirsty still.

Many feel they are becoming better because they severely condemn themselves. All these are

Let us turn to Jesus. "He would have given thee living water." The energy. He gives us spiritual forces that refresh and vitalize, that restore and maintain There's More To Home Lighting Than Meets The Eye!

Lighting is more than a means seeing after dark. With new equipment and new developments, you can now use it for setting that 'just right atmosphere" for the home's many activities.

With modern lighting, you can create mood changes in a roommake it festive or intimate-with the flick of a switch. You can use round or oval pools or long, thin tion of ourselves, particularly on a lines of light in your decorative studious, scientific basis such as scheme. The trick is to pick the that which characterizes so much type of lighting you want and to modern psychology and sociology, install the lighting equipment to Ready-made strip units, conceal- lead to despair.

ed spot lights, and a choice of bulbs in several colors are just a few of the items that can be installed without expensive remodelng. A recent innovation that makes mood lighting readily available is the control unit which can be used to dim or brighten all the lights in a room. Dimmers are particularly popular for dining rooms or party rooms.

Another recent device that has many uses is the pole lamp. This consists of a floor to ceiling pole light to be directed down for reading or toward the wall or ceiling to seed. for lighting a large area. This fixture, which plugs into an outlet just as any other lamp, is especialfoyer, the dining room, or in the Simple ready-made strip fixtures are easily installed on closet ceilings, under kitchen wall cabinets, over bathroom mirrors, or over a desk or work bench. There is also a ramily spent last Sunday with their strip fixture for use over the head of a bed. These and other new developments in lighting have been speeded up by the recognition that different types of lighting are needed for different activities in the home. For example, for playing bridge, reading, preparing meals, or working at a desk, you need a high degree of concentrated light. But your lighting can be softer and more diffused for listening to muse, dancing, conversation, or dining.

Now, with winter just ahead, is good time to experiment with various lighting effects and to brighten up dark corners. A few colored bulbs for decorative effect, a lighting strip under kitchen wall cabinets or in a dark closet, a new lamp for reading, and, above all, enough lamp bulbs of the right size can make all the difference in the enjoyment of your home on long winter evenings.

nan's attention on himself

For more than a hundred years ow, scientists have been turning

They have turned his gaze inward, downward, and in the case of psychiatry, even backward. These sciences of psychology, biology and sociology are good in themselves. But these have tended to make man self centered and even materialistic.

Suddenly now, the orientation has shifted and the shift may prove not only healthy but even holy. From ancient times the contemplation of the stars has led men to speculation about God. Contemplais necessarily depressing stuff. And without the grace of God, could

That seems to be precisely what has happened.

The new age of science, using telescopes instead of microscopes and gazing out into God's clear space instead of back into our own murky psychological depths, may let fresh air into modern thought.

In such air it may be easier for the Spirit of God to evoke more ready response. Astronomy, the prospect of interplanetary studies and even journeys-these are far removed from the introspective with three or more lights at broodings and negative agnosticism tached. Swivel joints allow each which were the frequent by-products of the recent sciences gone

These new directions in science may easily recapture the mood of mingled joy and reverence in which ly attractive for a corner of the the pealmist wrote: "I look up at those heavens of Thine, the work corner of the living room for read- of Thy hands, at the moon and the ces; what is man that Thou st remember him? What is Adam's breed, that it should claim Thy care? Thou has placed him only a little below the angels, crowning him with glory and honor, and bidding him rule over the works of Thy hand!"

This mood of mingled awe, yet joy, in the face of a universe opening before us, has already set in.

Perhaps it will prove a natural predisposition to supernatural faith. It is a mucn more healthy atmosphere for religion than that at least, of the world of science which has dominated some corners, since Darwin and Freud.

This mood is more likely to prove the greater, rather than narrowly "humanistic" to any man-centered, materialistic sense

It is the mood in which a new St. Bonaventure or Don Scotus could talk to us of the Christocentric universe. It is the mood of a generation with its eyes not inverted toward the depths, shallow or profound, of its own self, but on the stars and the glory of our heavenly Father.
