From The Desk Of Senator Forsyth

COMMITTEE WORK—I have been involved for several weeks with Representative Crawford of Swain in an effort to recover approximately $50,000 per year paid by the Tennessee Valley Authority to the State of North Carolina. Our contention has been that this money does not belong to the State but to the several counties in which land was taken for TVA use and reservoir and property management of TVA used in food control and manufacturing of hydroelectric power.

Last week a meeting was held with representatives of all counties involved and representatives of the Revenue Commission. The advanced planning in this matter was reflected by the fact that the revenue people are not going to fight this transfer of funds back to the counties and a bill was introduced in the house to make this change mandatory. Much credit is due Representative Crawford for his fine work and effort. I hope that we can turn back these funds to the several counties.

LEGISLATION—The Legislature for the most part had a busy week, highlighted by the Minimum Wage Bill which came up Wednesday.

Your senator voted against this measure for the reason that it was discriminatory, and particularly so against a small select group of people, principally between the ages of 50 and 65 years. The bill was without character or imagination. It used to be a fishing village, now very sad to me, with no hope and only waiting to die.

The ocean continues to wash away part of the Outer Banks. This is the preliminary of a breakthrough which will, if not corrected, flood hundreds of hamlets and towns in Eastern Carolina, and destroy the Inland Waterway. Federal help can be obtained in this, and there is now a bill in the Legislature to correct the situation.

We landed at Beaufort where a car was furnished us by one of Mr. Goerch's many friends. We saw Atlantic Beach and the whole area surrounding Morehead City, having lunch at Tony Seamon's famous seafood restaurant. We finally flew back to Raleigh after a memorable trip. Wish I had space to tell you more about it, and to give you a description and rundown on that amazing man, Carl Goerch. (Darned good pilot, too).

SIDE LIGHTS—Recently your senator had the wonderful opportunity of flying with Carl Goerch. We left Raleigh and flew to Ocracoke on the Outer Banks, landing on the highway. The trip there was most interesting as Mr. Goerch had a continuing commentary about the landmarks and history of the section over which we were passing.

In flying over Bath, oldest town in North Carolina, he told me that Bath was once visited regularly by the pirates which preyed on shipping along the North Carolina Coast. An English evangelist came to Bath to preach and teach during that period and was rudely received. The preacher had someone row him across the sound and upon reaching the other shore took off his boots and shook the dust of Bath from his feet, pronouncing a curse on the town of Bath that it would never grow or prosper; it never has.

At Ocracoke Island there is a beautiful harbor in which the pirate, Teach, was captured and beheaded. Flying from there down the Outer Banks, we passed over a community in which twelve people live—old men and women without any hope or prospect of the future. They are all

If They Read This, Rats May Want To Go Off On A Real Milk Binge

If an average rat drinks twice as much milk as he has to have, he'll live ten per cent longer.

If an average human being were like an average rat, by drinking an extra glass or two of milk a day he might live six years longer.

But no one is certain human beings are like rats in this respect. Nor does anyone know how much milk a man needs. And no one has determined how many people would be willing to drink more milk.

The Department of Agriculture would like to find out.

The best thing about these rat studies is that they indicate that the super milk drinkers have a better time.

They mature quicker. That is, they get interested in girl rats at a younger age. They stay younger longer. That is, they don't get so Nile and scraggly as quickly. And they stay interested—at even advanced ages for rats—in the ladies.

Researchers have now carried their studies on for some 90 generations of rats. Apparently milk is just as effective in the 90th generation as in the first.

Why all this work with rats? It's because researchers have found that rats are affected—in some ways—by some of the same things in a diet that humans are.

Shortages of some essential food elements hit rats in about the same way they hit humans. But there are some great differences being in the daily requirements of a rat and a human.

Department of Agriculture men—spurred on by the farmer—are already pushing for a bigger boom in milk drinking. They're advocating powdered milk in everything from soup to meat loaf. They're recommending that you "enrich" the milk you drink with a spoonful or so of powdered milk.

HOPES AND PLANS—I have been working for several weeks in an effort to set up a trip into the far west for a group of senators and members of the Department of Conservation and Development. The purpose: To make them aware of our resources and to ask their cooperation and help in exploiting our resources. We need so many things and certainly want all the help we can get.

Regards to everyone, and until next week, I am
Sincerely,
W. Frank Forsyth

If you don't like milk, eat cheese.

(Side note: one of the top nutrition researchers for the Department of Agriculture can't stand milk. She can't eat much cheese, because cheese has too many concentrated calories. "So what does a poor woman do?" she asks.)

It will be a long, hard road before the Department of Agriculture researchers find out whether extra milk adds to the life of a human or not—how much milk it takes and how many years it adds.

"Because, if you begin with children, you'll probably die before your experiment is concluded," says a young researcher. "And who could get even one human being to live on a controlled diet, all his life?"

But some private university researchers have a substitute plan in mind. They aim to find out just how much milk and calcium older people need to keep running normally from month to month.

They'll determine this by noting varies the amount of milk he drinks. Does he lose calcium from what effects show up when he does something to work on. Then his bones when he drinks this amount of milk? Does he throw off calcium as waste when he drinks so much more?

111. Forgiveness Inexcusable Sins, And Remission of Sin
1. Forgiveness
My son, your sins are pardoned. Mark 2:1. "Take courage, my child; your sins are pardoned." Matthew 9:2. "This is the reason why I tell you that her many sins are forgiven because she has loved much; but he who is forgiven little, loves little." And he said to her, "Your sins are forgiven." Then the other guests began to say to themselves, "Who can this man be who even forgives sins?" But he said to the woman, "Your faith has cured you; go, and be at peace." Luke 7:50.

At this point Peter came to Him with the question, "Master, how often shall my brother act wrongly towards me and I forgive him? Seven times?" "I do not say seven times," answered Jesus, "but seventy times seven times. So his master, greatly increased, handed him over to the jailers until he should pay all he owed him. In the same way my Heavenly Father will deal with you, if you do not all of you forgive one another from your hearts. Matthew 18:21-22, 34, 35.

"And I do not condemn you either," said Jesus; "go, and from this time do not sin any more." John 8:11.

2. Inexcusable
"If I had not come and spoken to them, they would have had no sin; but as the case stands they are without excuse for their sin." John 15: 22.

"But next, the man who had the one talent in his keeping came and said, Sir, I knew you to be as severe a man, reaping where you had not sown and garnering what you had not winnowed. So being afraid I went and buried your talent in the ground; there you have what belongs to you. Your wicked and slothful servant, replied his master—but as for this worthless servant, put him out into the darkness outside; here will be the weeping and gnashing of teeth. Matthew 25: 24-26, 30.

Then will they also answer. Lord when did we see Thee hungry or thirsty or homeless or ill-clad or sick or in prison, and not come to serve thee? But he will reply, in solemn truth I tell you that in so far as you withheld such services from one of the humblest of these, you withheld them from me.

MUSTARD SEED Catholic Chapel Rev. Joseph Dean CHRISTIAN TOLERANCE

1. If Catholics become a majority in a country, do they force their religious beliefs on others?

No. Before a person may join the Catholic Church and be baptized, he must go through a period of waiting and observing to make sure that the Catholic teaching contains the full teaching of Jesus Christ. If he is not convinced, then he may not join the Church. Catholic must be free in their decision, never forced into it. Church law states in Canon 1351: "No one who is unwilling may embrace the Catholic faith."

2. If Catholics believe that their church is the only true Christian Church, do they not strive to destroy all other Churches?

No, they do not. It is true that Catholic believe that Jesus gave Peter the keys of His Kingdom on earth, and founded His Church on Peter, as narrated in St. Matthew 16:18 and the following verses. It is also true that Catholics believe Peter to be their first pope and the apostles their first bishops. But they do not therefore make suppression of error or the destruction of other churches their goal.

Pope Pius XII emphasized the Catholic position in 1954 when he stated that repression of error must be subordinate to higher norms, such as free exercise of belief and religious practice in the world community of states.

3. What is included in the notion of tolerance?

Tolerance implies respect for another person, not because he is wrong or even because he is right but because he is human. Tolerance implies a willingness to communicate and to do so on terms which make real communication possible.

No service is done to truth when it is put forth in such a way that it repels those who hear it.

The truth one has, should be communication to others but it must be given with infidelity, lest it lose some of its majesty in the transfer. And here, is the major argument against the intolerant.

It is not that they have an excess of zeal in their care for the truth, as is often claimed; it is that they are so careless and irreverent in their treatment of truth. It is a question, we might say, of the mode of truth. When what is communicated is not really the truth, which has its own appeal, but the egotism, combativeness, greed or aggressiveness of those who think of themselves as defenders of the truth, then truth has been violated.

Rather than being the enemy of truth, tolerance serves truth more faithfully than zeal. In our age when the truth, if it is to be communicated at all must be freely communicated and freely accepted by free men, tolerance is the necessary mode of its communication.

In all ages the truth suffered at the hands of the intolerant, who made it seem ugly and drove good men from embracing it. But in our time, intolerance is by far the greatest enemy of the truth, especially when it poses as its greatest friend.
