Backward Glances...

10 YEARS AGO
 JULY 27, 1950

Ellie Fysal, Safety Services Field Representative of the American Red Cross, is conducting a Red Cross Water Safety Instructor's course at the Andrews-Murphy Swimming Pool. Classes for the instruction of Instructor and Life Saving are held each morning from 9 until 12 o'clock as a free service of the American Red Cross.

Murphy Lions will observe Ladies' Night on Tuesday, Aug. 8, according to announcement by President Dale Lee at the Tuesday evening meeting.

Official temperature and precipitation date released by the U.S. Weather Bureau shows that the year-round temperature in Cherokee County is comparatively mild. The average here is 57.5 degrees, slightly warmer than the average for all the mountain area, 56.5 degrees.

20 YEARS AGO
 JULY 25, 1940

Murphy and Cherokee County received another much deserved and greatly helpful boost this week in the form of a long feature article in the Greensboro Daily News describing the many outstanding features and advantages of this area both to tourists and industry.

The booster was none other than E. B. Jeffries, president of the Daily News, who visited here recently on a tour through Western North Carolina. Mr. Jeffries was greatly impressed by the now completed Hiwassee Dam, our native marble courthouse, and numerous scenic attractions of the region.

A series of farm tours will be held in Cherokee County during the week of August 5-10, according to plans now being made by the extension service, both at Murphy and Raleigh.

30 YEARS AGO

Household Help Not Receiving Social Security

GRADY GRUBBS
 Field Representative

Some household workers in Cherokee County are not receiving social security credits for their earnings, according to Grady Grubbs, field representative of the Social Security Administration.

The law makes the employers responsible for reporting for social security purposes the cash wages they pay to workers in their household, said Mr. Grubbs. Household workers who receive $50 or more in cash wages during a calendar quarter have earned social security credits for that period. This might be as little work as $4 per week. These workers should make sure that their employers report their wages because social security credits are based on these reports.

The law requires the employer to report the cash wages paid to household workers to the District Director of Internal Revenue, together with the social security tax due on these wages. The report must show the name, social security account number of the worker, and the amount of the wages paid.

The next quarterly report is due by July 31.

Mr. Grubbs emphasized that all household workers should keep a record of their cash wages. At least once every three years, they should check their social security records to make sure that all cash wages have been correctly reported. They can do this by calling or visiting the social security office at 40 North French Broad Avenue, Asheville, N. C.

There's A Way

BALTIMORE — One Baltimore woman insisted on reaching her husband when he was a patron of a tavern with an unlisted telephone number.

"I'm having a baby!" she screamed to the operator. "I've GOT to talk to my husband."

The emergency was honored. The call went through and the husband was called to the telephone.

"Ed," said the wife, "bring me home two hard crabs."
