AUNT HET

Bill hates to hear about his wife's old sweaters, but it ain't jealousy. He hates to think that a woman worthy of him could've liked such trash.

Nearly all of the appointments so far made by Governor Sanford have been enthusiastically approved by the people. None has met open or marked protest. The promptness with which vacancies were filled has been as gratifying as the caliber of men selected for the positions.

The appointment of Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles of Greensboro to succeed William P. Saunders as director of conservation and development was greeted with pleased surprise by Capitol Square. It has not been unusual for men of comparable business activities to take places on advisory commissions and boards of trustees. The contributions they have made to good government in these capacities has been largely responsible for the progress made by North Carolina. To get a man in his early forties, with such diverse and extensive business in which he has been active, to assume a full time job for the State in an achievement in which Governor Sanford and the entire state can take pride.

The C&D post is one of the most important in the State setup. With some 750 employees and a budget of around 4 million dollars a year, the department is not in a class for size with highways and education, but its scope is broader, dealing with practically every phase of activity.

Acceptance of the directorship by Bowles does not rule out entirely, but tends to discount the prospect of divorcing the commerce and industry division from C&D and establishing it as independent department. Governor Sanford has indicated he might propose at least a thorough study of that plan.

Fourth & Fifth Grade Library Clubs Meet

The Fourth Grade Club met Wednesday with Penny Smith presiding. Following the business session, the program was presented. Christmas stories and legends were given by David McCoy, Gary Hedrick, Penny Smith and Graham Bayless.

David McCoy's report was voted the best.

The Fifth Grade Club met on Thursday and was called to order by Hubert Wells, president. After a short business session, book reviews were given by Nancy Sanders, Judy Queen, Diane Wilkins, Danny Arrant, and Johnny Shields.

Judy Quinn won the prize for the best report.

There were 720 volumes checked out to be read over the Christmas holidays.

There were 2,265 volumes circulated during the month of December.

Choir Festival Is Sponsored By Churches

The churches of Cherokee, and Graham Counties are sponsoring a Choir Festival and Hymn Sing tonight (Thursday) at Murphy. A pot luck supper will begin at 7:00 p.m. and the singing at 8:00 p.m. Anyone interested in singing is invited to attend. The group will record some hymns to be played on the Cherokee-Graham Methodist Hour.

Methodist Plan Special Study

Andrews - Sunday evening, January 15, at 7:30 p.m., members of the First Methodist Church will begin a special study on alcohol entitled the "Stumbling Block."

A man and wife, members of Alcoholics Anonymous from Franklin, will speak at the evening service. On Sunday, January 22, Dr. F. E. Glaslock will speak, a film will be shown on January 29, and the pastor will conduct the study on February 5. Everyone is invited to attend every session.

Lion's Club

Andrews - The Andrews Lion's Club will host the Clyde Lions tonight (Thursday) at 7:00 p.m. at Hampton's Grill. This will be an inter-club visitation with the Clyde Lions presenting the program.

SEATING
 Secretary of State Thad E. Eure has completed the task of assigning seats to all members of the General Assembly and has prepared lists showing the seat numbers and a small diagram of the House and Senate floors, so that members and others can locate their places. These have been distributed to members. Heretofore, Secretary Eure has had ready for distribution immediately after the caucus the 'official' seating charts, showing the names of members in their respective seats. This year, with the caucus coming five weeks before the Legislature convenes, these master charts are not ready.

The 15 Republicans in the House will be seated along the back row in Nos. 98 through 112, running between the diagonal side aisles. These include four seats on the aisles, which usually are desired by senior Democrats.

There has been some criticism of Secretary Eure for 'splitting' the Gullford delegation and seating Republican William Osteen away from the other three members. However, under a resolution adopted by the General Assembly 30 years ago, every returning member is entitled to the same seat he had the previous session; or, has first choice over new members for any vacated seat. Two Gullford men did not come back, and within the legal time an old member filed request for one of the seats. Osteen made no request at all, and under the resolution, Eure was bound to assign the vacated seat to the returning member requesting it.

Most times the Gullford delegation has sought seats together, but there have been occasions when they preferred to be separated. Mecklenburg, Forsyth, Buncombe, and other large delegations have generally been divided in the seating arrangements.

NEWS COVERAGE
 If requests for accreditation of newspaper, radio and television reporters and photographers is any sign, the inauguration of Governor Terry Sanford and the 1961 session of the General Assembly broke all records for complete news coverage. The "Press-TV-Radio" identifications tabs were almost as conspicuous as military uniforms at the inaugural exercises Wednesday and Thursday. At that time, there were hundreds of amateur photographers and writers who did not qualify for the lapel badges, but were on the job taking notes and pictures to let the public know what was going on.

Advance information is that the news coverage of the General Assembly, which convenes on February 8, will have the largest contingent of "qualified" newsmen in history. Tentative plans are to have the newsroom re-installed on the east portico of the capitol, where it was located last session and provided the most convenient service that newsmen had ever known. Facilities inside the legislative halls will be more cramped and crowded than ever, but the authorities have indicated willingness to cooperate to fullest possible extent.

Telephone and telegraph companies have made arrangements for speeded up service for news media and legislators alike.

Applications are not in, but present indications are there will be at least fifty newspaper, radio, tee-vee and magazine reporters assigned to full-time coverage of the Legislature. That is almost one reporter for each member of the General Assembly.

The U. S. imported $507 million in sugar during fiscal 1959-60, mainly from Cuba and the Philippines. Sugar is the nation's second biggest agricultural import, next to coffee.

Bowater Expects Slightly More Production In 1961

Bowaters Southern Paper Corporation anticipates that 1961 may bring slightly higher rates of production to their mills at Calhoun, Tennessee, but substantially less than the mill's rated annual capacity of 430,000 tons, which is the largest of any newsprint mill in the United States.

Nevertheless, the new year will bring new problems in the form of increased output from competing Canadian mills as well as continued rising production costs.

The production of surplus bleached and unbleached saleable kraft pulp will continue on the pulp dryer machine, which will operate at less than rated capacity. The baled sheeted pulp is shipped to Bowater mills overseas or sold on the open market.

Costs of transportation, labor, raw materials and capital improvements continue to rise. It was pointed out, all of which increases the profit squeeze.

Long-range projections of the American economy point to a continuing increase in the demand for newsprint, so Bowaters Southern is continuing its program of capital improvements.

The capital improvements under way here include a series of modifications of the newsprint machines, which are already among the most modern in the world. Installation of additional groundwood pulp production equipment also will be completed in 1961.

Pulpwood procurement totaled some 340,000 cords in 1960, is expected to be higher in 1961, but it will be governed, as usual, by newsprint production requirements.

Federal meat inspection was inaugurated in the U. S. on June 30, 1906.
