REPORT FROM

U.S. Senator

JESSE ★★

HELMS

WASHINGTON—One of the television reporters at Kansas City stopped me as I came down from the giant podium in the convention hall. "How does it feel, Senator," he asked, "to have your name placed in nomination for Vice President of the United States?"

The answer to that was easy. He knew, as did everyone else, that it was a symbolic gesture of support, initiated without my knowledge by friends in about 20 states which I have visited during the past year.

Then the television reporter asked: "What were your thoughts as you stood up there, watching the demonstration below?"

That one was easy, too.

I was thinking of two great North Carolinians, Bill Rodman and Sim DeLapp.

TWO—These two men had passed away, just before I left Washington for Kansas City. Both were the kind of friends whose departure left an enormous void. They were men of high principle. Both had served their country well. Time after time, both had gone out of their way to be kind to me. Most of all, both left an indelible imprint of their ideals upon my consciousness.

They didn't belong to the same political party—but, aside from that, they were remarkably similar. Both were respected lawyers. Mr. Rodman had served as a state legislator, later as North Carolina's Attorney General, and finally as a member of the N. C. Supreme Court. Mr. DeLapp had almost single-handedly kept alive the hope of a two-party system in our state.

They were honest men, dedicated to preserving the liberty of the American people. They were men of principle.

THOUGHTS—So my thoughts were of them, and what they had meant to me, as I stood in that steamy convention hall amidst the ear-splitting shouts, and the horn-blowing from the Texas delegation.

I remembered a comment by Mr. Rodman, spoken softly years ago when he faced a difficult decision. "There is no right way to do a wrong thing," he said. And then he discussed the folly of compromise. "If you start compromising," he said, "there's no end to it."

Mr. DeLapp placed his faith totally in the Lord. The last time I talked with him was by telephone, a few days before his death. As I look back on that conversation, I realize that he must have had a foreboding that his days were limited. "I don't know how much longer I have on this earth," he said, "but this much I do know: God is speaking to America." He paused, then went on: "The question is, will America listen?"

GREATNESS—The lives of these two citizens supply a measurement of the greatness of America. The legacy which they leave to the rest of us is that our Founding Fathers realized that the strength of this nation would be determined by the character of the American people.

If we keep our priorities in order, and refuse to compromise them, we need have no fear of the future. Bill Rodman and Sim DeLapp kept their priorities straight. And both made immense contributions to their state and nation.

LIBERTY LINES

Courageous Jack

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Liberty Lobby News Service)—Jack Anderson, heir to classic muckraker Drew Pearson, has an astounding ability to come up with secret documents. For example, he pulled the plug on the Pentagon Papers even when the FBI couldn't get them.

It could be said that he is a modern day Robin Hood—stealing secrets from the richly endowed and giving them to the poor, uneducated masses who don't know what is going on.

So, here's a strange situation. Jack Anderson, the one man in America who should be able to learn the truth about Nelson Rockefeller, hasn't devoted a derogatory word to him. He hasn't discovered a single disturbing fact about Rockefeller he feels worth printing.

Anderson very seldom prints accolades. He plies the muckraker's trade: expose, illicit attachments, assignments, illegal meetings, payoffs, bribery and blackmail. The kind of gossip people relish reading. While there is merit regarding his journalistic efforts, why does Anderson carefully pick his victims?

Why did he back away from this great opportunity... the expose of Nelson Rockefeller?

To begin to reveal the web of power the Rockefeller family wielded and the manner it was attained, would fill Anderson's column for months... perhaps years. The gigantic power plays, interspersed with tid-bits Anderson's aides could readily uncover, would be eagerly awaited and read by millions of readers.

So, why has he backed off from this once in a lifetime opportunity?

It is easy to figure out when you consider that Nelson Rockefeller (one of his brothers), owns or controls a significant interest in nearly every major radio, television, newspaper or publishing venture in the United States.

In short, if Anderson should step out of line in his column, Rocky could kick his column out of a considerable number of newspapers.

It appears it is not that Mr. Anderson can't find anything wrong with Nelson Rockefeller, it is that he doesn't want to find anything wrong.

Since Liberty Lobby is well aware of the Rockefeller role in shaping national and world conditions and isn't afraid to tell it as it is, it's surprising Anderson hasn't jumped on the Rockefeller band wagon and attacked Rockefeller's leading critic—Liberty Lobby.

4-H Club News

The Union Chapel 4-H Club was organized in January 1976, and has had a successful and exciting year of 4-H activities and events. The club sponsored a car wash for the benefit of their club treasure. Educational programs have been presented to the club, such as, a first aid program presented by the ambulance service. The leaders of the club, Mrs. Teresa Locklear, Mrs. Rhoda Locklear and Mrs. Joyce Jacobs have worked hard to involve the 4-H'ers in many activities.

Also, the president of the club, Miss Doreen Jacobs, participated in county demonstration day. Doreen won at the county level and represented Robeson County at the district level where she also won. On July 27, 1976, at Raleigh, N.C., Doreen represented Robeson County at the state level. Although Doreen did not win, she did a very good job with her demonstration.

Other 4-H'ers from the Union Chapel Club were involved in the Robeson County camping program. Several of the 4-H'ers went to camp at Betsy-Jeff Penn 4-H Center where they enjoyed a week of fun and fellowship. Gwendolyn Locklear of the Union Chapel 4-H Club participated in a sewing class held at the Extension Office. This class was conducted by Mrs. Mollye Briley, Home Economics Extension Agent. Participants in the sewing class had the opportunity to participate in a state dress revue in Raleigh, N.C. on August 5, 1976.

Another club, Bethel Hill 4-H Club, was organized in September 1975. Since last September, the club has sponsored profit raising activities for the benefit of their club. The 4-H'ers and leaders worked hard to build a float which they entered in a parade held at Pembroke on July 3, 1976. The title of their float was "To Make The Best Better" which is the 4-H motto. The 4-H'ers with the help of the leaders, Mrs. Gladys Pierce, Mrs. Edith Hammond, Mrs. Janice Godwin Locklear and Mrs. Mary Chavis have been involved in county events and activities and worked on community projects.

The 4-H clubs are beginning another year of 4-H activities and events. Four-H'ers are looking forward to bigger and better things in the next year. With the help of the 4-H county extension agents and the leaders, 4-H'ers in all clubs will be able "To Make The Best Better" in the coming year.
