The Life and Times of Henry Berry Lowry

As fate would have it, Henry Berry Lowry and the Lowry Gang learned that John Saunders was an undercover agent whose aim was to win the Indians' trust, finally betraying and capturing the entire Lowry Gang. It is difficult to ascertain exactly how long the Lumbee River Indian outlaws knew of Saunders' ruse. One source states that Henry Berry saw two sets of foot prints in a clearing that Saunders was witnessed leaving, thus signifying that he had met with an outsider. Saunders was unaware, however, that his plot had been discovered and that his life was in great peril.

When the wagon which was to haul the Lowry Gang, their families and belongings to Mexico and safety failed to depart, Saunders risked calling a secret meeting of local whites who were involved in the plot. The meeting was to be held at a secret camp near W.C. McNeill's.

When one of W.C. McNeill's sons arrived at the meeting, the other young white men who had arrived earlier rushed up to him and whispered for him to be careful of any sudden movement for they were surrounded. Nevertheless, McNeill reached for his pistol. Before he could draw the pistol, however, four men rose from behind the bushes with drawn guns: Henry Berry Lowry, Stephen Lowry, George Applewhite and Boss Strong. Henry Berry took McNeill's pistol and told him to make himself at home for he would be here a while.

The meeting had been called for the afternoon; by nightfall Saunders had still not arrived. Guards were placed along the road to warn Henry Berry when the undercover agent and ex-Boston police officer arrived. Thomas Lowry knew where there was a nearby brandy still. He, along with a few more members of the Lowry Gang, went and raided the still and returned to the camp site with the brandy. Stephen Lowry produced some cards he had bought from the Scotch Fair. The men sat around the camp fire, drinking brandy and playing cards, awaiting the arrival of Saunders.

Henry Berry was not sure of the three McNeill brothers' roles in the plot whereby the Lowry Gang and their families were to be betrayed and captured before reaching the safety of Mexico. There was bad blood between the Lowry Gang and the McNeill family: Oakley, Sandy, and Malcolm McNeill were John Taylor's brothers-in-law. Taylor had long been an enemy of the Lowrys long before he participated in the murder of Henry Berry's father and brother in 1865. It was the general assumption of the Indians and Blacks of the county that he was head of the Ku Klux Klan that so terrorized the hapless ex-slaves and Indians of the county.

One of the gang member's hound dog bayed in the distance. Henry Berry took Oakley with him to investigate the disturbance. When the misted duo arrived they found that the dog had tracked a possum. Henry Berry, always heavily armed, propped his rifle against the tree and climbed the tree in an attempt to shake the possum out. The young white man moved the rifle slightly but made no attempt to use the weapon against Henry Berry. Henry Berry came down out of the tree and the two men returned to the campfire. More likely than not, Oakley was undecided whether or not the rifle was loaded; fearing that Henry Berry was trying to trick him.

Later Henry Berry led Sandy McNeill into the swamps. The Indian leader exploded: "God damn your soul, I want you to tell me where Saunders is. He is expected here. If you don't tell me where he is and why he don't come I will kill you dead. I intend to kill you anyway when I get Saunders. You had better own right up!" ("To Die Game" by W. McKee Evans.) Sandy McNeill admitted nothing. He was led back to the campfire unharmed.

Around dawn the next morning, Saunders' voice shattered the early morning silence: "I surrender!" Henry Berry now had the culprit he had come for. He released the other young white men. Before releasing Sandy McNeill, however, he warned the young white bounty hunter that he had been caught in three lies already and that he had better behave himself in the future.

Next week: Saunders' execution.

MT. AIRY NEWS

Violie Locklear

The Brotherhood rendered special music on Sunday morning at Mt. Airy Church.

The monthly singing was held Sunday night. Other than the home church choirs, participating were The Oak Grove Gosseliers, along with their pastor, Rev. Grover Oxendine, The Union Chapel Adults, The Evergreen Ladies, and Mr. Lanford Godwin.

ATTENDS CONFERENCE

A Baptist Young Women's Conference was held October 8th and 9th at Ridgecrest Baptist Assembly. Those from Mt. Airy Church attending were Mrs. Brenda Sanderson, Mrs. Gail Locklear, Mrs. Ann Hagans, Mrs. Adrene Locklear, Misses Sue Ellen Chavis, Winnie Lee Clark, Donna and Rose Ann Cummings. Also attending was Dianne Oxendine of Harper's Ferry Baptist Church.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Florie Locklear was honored with a surprise dinner for her 70th birthday given by her children on Saturday, October 2, at the Recreation Building. Helping her to celebrate was son-in-law, Mr. Johnson Locklear of Detroit, Michigan, whose birthday was on that day. Also in attendance were six of her children: Mrs. Marneice Cummings, Mr. William Kay and Rencl P. Locklear, Mrs. Adelaide Locklear, Mrs. Ciella Locklear and Mrs. Nellie Paulk.

A buffet dinner of ham, turkey and all the trimmings was served to several grand children and several relatives and friends. The honoree received many gifts.

Mrs. Stella Locklear underwent surgery again on her leg at Cape Fear Valley Hospital in Fayetteville. Her condition is better.

We have sick ones in our community. Please remember all them in your prayers.

Anyone who would like a baby sitter, please call Darlene Carter at 521-2113.

FBLA Club to attend State Convention

Pembroke - "Supporting Our Heritage of Free Enterprise by Building American Skills" is the theme selected for this year's program of the Pembroke Senior High Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America.

The FBLA has already held several meetings and on Sept. 30, thirty members attended the Fall Leadership Conference held at Robbins Senior High School, Robbins, NC. Ramona Maynor, elected last year as state historian, spoke on "Effective Communication." Mrs. Mary B. Locklear, one of the club advisors, chaired a group session on chapter events.

Plans are now being made for representatives from the Pembroke Senior FBLA to attend the state convention this month.

Yvette Thompson is president of the chapter, assisted by Jeffery Lucas, vice president; Mona Jacobs, secretary; Tina Jones, treasurer; Wanda Bullock, reporter; Karen DeCarlo, historian; and Valerie Roberts, parliamentarian. Mrs. Mary B. Locklear and Mrs. Mabel Zeigler, business teachers, are advisors to the chapter.

As part of community service, four of the chapter members assisted the Bloodmobile held last month at the Jaycee Hut.
