Indian Library Planned

Since June of this year, representatives from rural and urban indian communities and various state agencies and professional library associations have been making plans for the development of a State Plan for Indian Library and Information Services. North Carolina is one of four states including Minnesota, New Mexico and Washington selected for the development of state library plans for Indians by the Library Project of the National Education Association.

Technical assistance is being provided by PROJECT ILSTAC (Indian Library Services Technical Assistance Center) of the National Indian Education Association in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Dr. Cheryl A. Metoyer is the Project Director.

Planning meetings have been held in the Indian community of Pembroke and more recently at the Ramada Inn in Apex near Raleigh. Representatives of the Haliwa, Choharie, Lumbee, Cumberland County Association of Indian People, Guilford Co. Native Americans and Metrolina Native American Association, Waccamaw- Siouan, the Qualla- Boundary Reservation Public Library in Cherokee, community public and school librarians, Title IV Indian Education Coordinators, community service workers, and representatives of the N. C. State Library, the North Carolina Library Association, Southeastern Library Association, the N. C. State Department of Public Instruction-Division of Educational Media and the N. C. Commission of Indian Affiars, have been involved in several planning sessions for the development of a North Carolina State Plan for Indian Library and Information Services.

Efforts have been made to involve state agencies responsible for the delivery of library and information services and professional library organizations and associations in the initial planning with representatives of the North Carolina Indian communities. Thus far, these agencies and associations have endorsed the need for expanding existing library and information services and encouragine the development of new services for Indians. Dr. Annette Phinazee, President of the North Carolina Library Association and Dean of the School of Library Science at North Carolina Central University, one of the two American Library Association accredited schools for library education, Ms. Marian Leith, Assistant State Librarian and Sue Barclay of the Division of Public Libraries, Ms. Elsie Brumback, Director of Educational Media of the N. C. State Department of Public Instruction, and A. Bruce Jones, Executive Director of the N. C. Commission of Indian Affairs have represented their respective agencies and organizations in the planning and development of the North Carolina State Plan. Ms. Elaine Von Oesen is the representative for the Southeastern Library Association, the regional professional library association for Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

To date, the Planning Committee has developed and approved a draft of the N. C. State Plan with a statement of goals, purpose and scope, and a priorities and action plan. Basic demographic data has been compiled and additional date relative to public library services and public education and school library services should be completed and submitted in early December, the projected date for completion of the N. C. State Plan for signatures of respective state agencies entering into the policy agreement.
