TO GIVE YOU THE FIT OF YOUR LIFE!

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT: Telly Savalas' love affair with the City of New York has gone quite beyond his returning to New York to film nine more episodes of his "Kojak" series for television. In addition to his TV commitments here, the bald-headed actor also has selected New York as the site for nightclub, motion pictures and record dates. In early January, he will begin to film his next movie "The Mat" in the Big Apple. It's based on his own script about a gent who sells his soul to the devil, a beautiful woman. And, he said, following a wild Greek handkerchief dance at Sirocco, he will also record an album of love songs sometime in January at a Manhattan studio for his MCA Records label. Actress Ellen Corby, who plays the grandmother in the television series "The Waltons" has been removed from the critical list at a Los Angeles hospital. Ms. Corby, 63, who is recovering from a stroke, is now listed in fair condition. Doctors still don't know how long she'll be hospitalized... Seen making leaves in his Connecticut backyard in a Teacher's Scotch T-shirt: George C. Scott... Danny Thomas, whose NBC series "The Practice" should be right at home on the "family hour" of television viewing, thinks the whole concept of the hour is hypocritical. No one to miss words, Danny uses terms like "Hukum" and "bunk" to describe the great experiment that is supposed to protect the shellie cars and innocent eyes of children from the more brutal excesses of the 21-inch screen. "All the 'family hour' does is keep the kids up long after they should be in bed," Danny says. "They stay up long after they should be in bed, suffering through the family hour so they can watch the shows that offer them plenty of violence and whatever sex is being shown. It's turning the kids into insomniacs, that's all."

...Marlene Dietrich was seen sipping Hennessy and soda in a Lincoln limousine in mid-Manhattan...

FOUNDING THE TV BEAT: Starsky and Hutch, the crime busting heroes of the ABC television series, may be all buddy-buddy on the screen, but off, it's all snarl, snarl. In fact, success has spoiled the pair that the set is closed to all except the immediate cast and the film crew, so that word of their temperamental behavior doesn't get around. "Those two have become spoiled rotten," a female assistant to the producer told me. "When they come to the show, Paul-Michael Glaser (Starsky) has had a small part in the movie version of "Fiddler on the Roof." David Soul (Hutch) was best known as the middle man brother in "Here Comes the Brides." But the way they act now, you think they were God's gift to television. They not only grouse at each other, but they act moody with the rest of the cast and crew." An ABC executive was also annoyed at the stars' prima donna behavior. "It's too bad that stars sometimes behave as if they were irreplaceable. They forget that without the show and the network they'd still be unknowns." The "Speakeasy Band" in the "Bugsy Malone" film musical was made up of members of the #British National Youth Jazz Orchestra. Their leader, Bill Ashton, a stickler for accuracy, broke down the playback tapes into musical parts so that the musicians were visually absolutely truthful to the recordings and not just miming. "Bugsy Malone" is based on the paper back published by BANTAM BOOKS...

TV TICKER: Here's a tooth some twosome: Debralee Scott the cute little sexpot of "Mary Hartman" and Fonzy Henry Winkler, together at a recent late night session at the Improv, a much favored Hollywood nightspot. A United Air lines stewardess reports that one of her first-class passengers treated the entire roach section to Gordon's Gin and never revealed his name. For a few taping session, Mary Kay Place had to hide a bandaged right hand from the cameras on "Mary Hartman." She cut the hand when a jan she was opening broke into splinters. Be careful of those guitar strummin fingers, Mary... There's getting to be a wider and wider divergence of temperament and behavior between Sonny Bono and Cher Allman. Cher and her husband Gregg have completed a course in EST and claim it makes
