INSIDE TV

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT: A new series which NBC is afraid to run... The show is called Snip, and it could be the funniest TV comedy of the season, the only thing wrong-NBC is afraid to run it. "We didn't deal with homosexuality," David Brenner told me, who was to have starred in the series, a chronicle of the adventures of a Cape Cod housewife. "Not any more so than most television shows are doing now. If we were, the cancellation might have made some sense. As it is, I still don't understand." Six segments were filmed before network knees began to quake. According to one NBC official, they will be shown late at night next summer, a practice known in the industry as "filling." Networks use certain shows at that time when there are few viewers mainly to fill time slots without spending more money. "The schedule was crowded, and one show had to be removed," a net work official explained to me. Snip was probably the funniest show in the entire lineup, but television is a stage place. Everyone tries to play it very safe. And it was safer to leave on another police drama than it was to take the chance with a comedy about a hair dresser-even a straight hairdresser."

Snip was risky by today's television standards, not because it was dirty, which it wasn't, and not because it dealt with sexual matters, which it didn't. But the top men decided it was ahead of its time. That was its only problem and it proved to be a tragic one. "The cancellation caught everyone concerned by surprise." "It was one of the most original, innovative shows on TV," Brenner's co-star Lesley Warren declared. "It was fresh and funny. Everyone had seemed to like it so much when they saw the pilot and gave us the go-ahead," Brenner, who is back on the nightclub circuit, does not harbor any illusions that the show might some day be resurrected. "It's over," he said. "But I hope everyone will stay up real late and watch it whenever NBC decides to put it on. That would be great if it had an audience of millions." Multi-talented Shari Lewis and Dixie Cronin, producers of The Shari Lewis Show, TV's first situation comedy performed entirely by puppets, enters its second year of nationwide syndication in the fall. In recent years, Ms. Lewis has starred in a string of TV specials in the U. S. and Canada and in series in England and Australia. For her TV work, Ms. Lewis has won five Emmy Awards, a Peabody Award and the International Monte Carlo TV Award.

but he is only in the second year of a five-year contract with the producers of the series. Still, Glaser is trying to quit. He's even suing his producers to get out of his agreement. "I've fought to make it as good a series as it could be," says Glaser. "I don't want to destroy the show—that's not my intention. I'm out to do the best I can in my lifetime, and I feel it's time to move on." John Travolta, star of TV's Welcome Back Kotter, is still keeping steady company with actress Diana Hyland. Diana did a comedy TV pilot with Dick Van Patten called Eight is Enough that is still waiting for an air date. "Dick Van Dye signed a major long-term deal today as corporate spokesman for Gabriel Industries, Inc., a leading manufacturer of toys, games, hobbies, crafts and home playground equipment, it was announced by Jerome M. Fryer, Gabriel's Chairman of the Board. Marking the first time that any toy company ever had a corporate spokesman, Van Dye was featured extensively in Gabriel's $5.2 million television and print advertising program, point-of-sale promotional materials, as well as trade and personal appearances. "Dick will be totally involved in the Gabriel story," stated Mr. Fryer, "much as O. J. Simpson is now going with Hertz and Betty Westbrook six years ago with Westinghouse." To be continued...

INSIDE SOAP OPERA: The ill-fated couple who wrote and produced NBC's short-lived series Fay, which was cancelled early in the season, is now trying its hand at a new series.

Writer Susan Harris and producer Paul Ungar Witt are busy with the new TV soap opera entitled Fay. Soap deals with a "basic soap operate concept," according to Witt. "It's about two families and how they relate to each other," he explains. "But we are not doing a satirical soap, we're just having fun with the soap opera concept." The soap's plot deals with two upper-middle class families in Connecticut. Jessica Tate and Mary Dallas Campbell are sisters in the serial. One of Mary's two sons is a homosexual who wants to have a sex change operation. Mary's other son, Danny, is trying to get out of the mafia... Soap stars are starting to slink away to expand their talents. Gillian Spencer, who played Jennifer Hughes on As the World Turns from 1972-75 had her character conveniently killed off so that Gillian could go into writing. And she's writing for the soaps. Gillian's also appeared in featured acting roles on One Life to Live, The Guiding Light, Edge of Night and the now defunct Secret Storm... Another star who's left the soap scene is Deborah Courtney, who plays opera Alesta on Love of Life for the last two years. Deborah says she left LOL to pursue "other career activities." Her replacement is Roxanne Gregory...

INSIDE THE TUBE: "I've done my thing and I'm ready to move on," asserts Paul Michael Glaser, the Starsky and Hutch. He's tired of the series and wants to do feature films,
