Fifteen Pembroke Senior High School students have participated in an unusual program this school year. These students have taken an active part in a Special Reading Program at Union Elementary School where they have worked on a one-to-one basis, or with very small groups to supplement the instruction of the regular teacher. These students were transported to Union Elementary for one hour three days a week.

High school students participating were Robin Campbell, Chuck Canady, Nancy Carter, Rita Cummings, Mary Davis, Abigail Chavis, Keith Jacobs, Brent Locklear, Sheila Locklear, Wanda Locklear, Michael Lowry, Michael Maynor, Tonya Thompson, William A. Lowry, and Travis Sampson. These students were supervised by Barto Clark, Jr., Pembroke Senior High teacher.

Teachers at Union Elementary School who participated were Mrs. Ethel O. Locklear, first grade; Mrs. Della O. Locklear, second grade; and Mrs. Annette Swett, third grade. From all reports from both students and the teachers, this has been both a rewarding and profitable experience.

This was a special project of the leadership class taught by Mr. Barto Clark, Jr. at Pembroke Senior High School.

LOCOMOTIVE

The locomotive long ago
That chugged along the track,
Has disappeared and only diesel
Engines shake my shack.
That lonesome whistle once I heard,
That used to thrill me so,
Is but a memory of days
I never more shall know.
The steaming stack, the smoke and steam
That used to scent the air
With charcoal odors, are no more.
But only I now care.
Like some sweet relic from the past,
The gammon, too, is gone.
They call that "progress," yet for me
Its beauty lingers on.
Those diesel fumes that fill the air
With gas as foul as sin,
Are not for those who dare to dream
It may take steam to win.
To win the fight for energy,
And make us strong once more.

WHY

"Why do you wish to write?" he said.
"What can a Lumbee say?"
His face was grave, he shook his head,
His features wreathed dismay.
I, in dismay as great as his,
Was wont to make reply.
"The reason, sir, the reason is—"
I looked him in the eye.
"I know now why I have to write,
I only know I do."
A gentle smile began to breathe
Itself on features new.
"All right," he said, "I only thought
You had an axe to grind."
He spread the contract he had brought.
I bowed my head and signed.

PRAYER FOR INSPIRATION

Oh, Lord, let me a morsel find
Of heaven for my soul,
And grant me freedom for my mind
Apart from man's control.
Oh, let me not fall into line
With codes that shake or sway,
But let me find Truth's sacred shrine,
Abide there day by day.
It matters not what others think,
Or what they preach or say,
The Truth is Thine, the freedom's mine
Just keep me on the way.
Let me be me! Let me be free!
I need no vain taboos;
Just speak Thy Word and undeterred,
Thy chartered course I'll choose!

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

They say we should stop the heartbeat
Of fellow human beings,
We who cannot bestow life
Or even end our own strife!
They say killing is all right,
So long as it's done as a group
And in the name of Society!
They say it's okay to kill a killer
Or someone who raped in the night,
But God commands, "Thou shalt not kill."
And a double killing doesn't make
What was a single killing right.
I resent this whore called Society
Forcing me to become a party to murder,
Multiplied murders which I abhor
And have no wish at all to commit
In Society's name or anyone else's.
Only God can give life.
And only He has the right to take it.
Once it has been given!

PES. holds variety of programs

The students of Pembroke Elementary School have been involved in a variety of music and drama programs during the current school year. To culminate the year's activities a series of assembly programs will be presented during the week May 3-6. Each program will be presented twice daily at 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

The groups participating are as follows:

Tuesday - Exceptional classes will present "Hansel and Gretel" in narration and song by Humpertink.

Wednesday - The first grade will present a musical play "The Enchanted Attic" by Maryhale Woolsey.

Thursday - Grade two will also present a musical play entitled "The Carnival Princess" by Beatrice Casey.

Friday - Kindergarten classes - A Juvenile Operetta in one act entitled "The Lemonade Stand."

On May 5 at 8:00 p.m. in the school gym the second grade will give a performance.

Parents are invited to attend these programs during the week. Parents are especially invited to attend the performances involving their child.
