The Life and Times of Henry Berry Lowry

BY GARRY LEWIS BARTON

woods. He swore his name was Locklear, but questioned close he owned up that he was a son of Zion Lowry-but he had a Lowry catechism by heart so perfectly that we could learn nothing from him. Thinking to have some fun, the men put him on the road with orders to run, and some high running he did, looking back at every jump, expecting no doubt to be shot."

The above excerpt from Wishart's diary gives us a fairly clear picture of the terrible conditions existing in the swamps-interspersed throughout Scauffletown. The swamps proved to be an advantage to the Lowry Gang. The Indians were reared in the swamps; as children they played in them. As men they were forced to hide out in the swamps that they had become familiar with over the years. Conversely, the whites were totally unfamiliar with the many footpaths and byways winding throughout the dense, jungle-like swamps. There were few excursions into the swamps by white companies that did not result in the whites getting lost.

Even the ill-tempered Steve Lowry, Henry Berry's brother, seemed to tire of the life he was forced to live; always on the run, ever on the alert. Colonel Francis Marion Wishart's diary continues from last week.

"June 11, 1871: It is reported that Steve Lowry was at church and heavily armed. He talked freely, complaining that he was tired of the life he was leading. No one interfered with him. It is supposed that he was looking for a certain fellow (me) to kill him.

"June 12, 1871 - The company met, to start from Shoe Heel (now the present-day town of Maxton) Day break came upon us before we could get started. All of us took to the woods but three and we were discovered before night. Of the thirteen men we started out with, two of them were drunk by dark; one lost his boots; another, his pistol. Took a woods path but got lost again as our pilot was drunk too. We lay down for the night and tried to sleep but it was hot as hell. We struck a creek and began wading near D. McCormac's place, but a negro on the hill saw us. Went to a spring to guard it, and another negro came along to find us. The red bugs and yellow flies are terrible-would kill an elephant. Came upon Melvin Lowry in the

It should be noted that the negroes referred to in the above excerpt were Indians. Despite the outcome of the war, local whites continued to consider Robeson County Indians and Blacks one and the same. The reason Wishart seemed to be concerned about being spotted by the "negroes" was because he knew that the Indians would go and inform Henry Berry of the Wishart company's whereabouts. In this manner it was relatively simple for Henry Berry and his notorious gang of outlawed desperados to evade them. Many times while Wishart and his men would be combing a certain area, he would learn the next day that Henry Berry and the Lowry Gang had been eating supper with a white farmer right under the noses of the white hunters. This proved to be very frustrating to Col. Wishart.

Mayor Strickland addresses Pembroke Kiwanis Club

Program chairman Jim Paul introduced Mayor Reggle Strickland, who spoke to the Pembroke Kiwanis Club on Tuesday evening, May 10th.

Mayor Strickland thanked the Club for its support of Pembroke and its administration. He asked if any knew the origin of the name "Pembroke." The name came from Pembroke Jones and as you travel around the country you will notice that Pembroke are railroad junctions.

Mayor Strickland has served 527 days and has 304 days remaining. He is glad he was successful in running for Mayor and able to help in straightening out the difficulties facing the town. He felt that somebody had to do it, and his mother said that if he would run for Mayor she would pray for him.

population of Pembroke is now 2,370. There are 32 people employed by the town: 5 in the town hall; 11 in the police department; 12 in the street department; 2 in the fire department; and 2 in the water department. In 1976-77 the town budget was $452,000. Sources of income are revenue-sharing from the government, taxes, water-sewer fees, and ABC revenues. Two thirds of the town employees are subsidized through the government CETA program. The water and sewer truck was completely worn out and a new one was purchased. Pembroke faces more trying times and we have 304 days left to straighten out these problems.

On July 1st, the new court house located in the former First Union National Bank Building will be dedicated. The year-round recreation program spent $17,000 but took in only between 300 and 400 dollars, so the county program with federal funds is building tennis courts and ball parks. Town Hall Recreation Center is a possibility in developing.

In McDuffie Cummings, town manager; Ruby Smith, town clerk; and the Town Commissioners we have the best possible people who are doing a great job. With the addition of College Terrace, Chavis Park and Locklear Court the estimated

Celebrates 5th Birthday

Jerry Chavis celebrated his fifth birthday on Wednesday, May 10, 1977 with his friends and classmates at the Pembroke Lumber Longhouse Learning Center.
