JACK ANDERSON TO LEAD OFF PSU'S LYCEUM SERIES

Famed Columnist at PSU August 30

PEMBROKE--Jack Anderson, famed syndicated columnist, radio commentator and also a regular featured member of ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America" program, will be at Pembroke State University Tuesday, Aug. 30, as the first attraction on PSU's Lyceum Series for the 1977-78 academic year.

Anderson will speak at the PSU Performing Arts Center, beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets for the event are $2 for everyone. Tickets may be reserved by telephoning 521-4214, Ext. 287, after Aug. 22.

Al Dunavan, director of dramatic activities at Pembroke State University is delighted at having Anderson to lead off the PSU entertainment year. "So many people read his column each day and see him on television that we consider this a grand opportunity to have him here in person."

Anderson has been at the bottom of some of the biggest exposes to come out of Washington. Admitting he is a muckraker, Anderson insists his object is not sensationalism but reform. He considers it the special calling of the press to expose corruption.

He was the first to report that the CIA had attempted to assassinate foreign leaders. During the Watergate era, he broke many of the major stories, being the first to implicate John Mitchell and H.R. Halderman in the scandal.

In 1972 Anderson received the Pulitzer prize for proving that President Nixon and Henry Kissinger lied to Congress and public about the U.S. tilt toward Pakistan in the India-Pakistan conflict.

It was also Anderson's stories that led to the celebrated Senate hearings on the International Telephone and Telegraph Co.

A protégé of Drew Pearson, Anderson took over Pearson's Washington Merry-Go-Round column in 1969 when Pearson died. It appears now in more than 970 newspapers.

The 52-year-old Anderson was born in Long Beach, Calif., but reared in Salt Lake City, Utah. When he was 12, he got his first newspaper job as a $7-a-week reporter for a weekly in the Salt Lake City suburbs. By the time he was 18, he was working on the city desk at the Salt Lake Tribune.

Jack Anderson

A practicing Mormon, he accepted a call from his church to serve two years (1942-43) as a full-time missionary in the South. Hestill teaches Sunday School and delivers occasional sermons.

During World War II, he served briefly as a cadet officer in the U.S. Merchant Marine but resigned to accept credentials as a civilian war correspondent. Later when inducted into the Army, he was assigned to the Army newspaper, Stars and Stripes.

Along with his other activities, he is Washington editor of Parade Magazine.

Other Lyceum Series events coming up at Pembroke State University this year are:

--Nov. 21--Woody Herman and his Young Thundering Herd.

--Feb. 8--National Opera: "The Barber of Seville."

--April 4--Bradley Fields, a magician who Dunavan says has drawn a standing room-only crowd at Madison Square Garden.

PSU also has the option for one additional event which Dunavan will announce in the near future.

School. Winfree also received a supplement of $1200.00 for coaching football.

But, according to the attorneys for the Robeson County schools, the contract was terminable by either party and did not come under the provisions of the tenure act for teachers.

Early Educator Revisits Pembroke Area and Notes Changes at PSU

John R. May and his wife recently visited Pembroke--his first visit since he headed the Education Department of then Pembroke State College for Indians, now Pembroke State University.

He held this position in 1937 and remained at PSU from the spring of '37 until the fall of '39.

He developed life long friendships with

Ira Pate Lowry (who headed the music department) and Sanford Sampson, who recently retired from teaching at Pembroke Senior High School. Since then they have maintained their friendship with long-distance telephone calls, letters and exchanged Christmas cards.

After leaving Pembroke, Dr. May went to Salisbury State College where he remained until he retired in 1974. Upon his retirement, Dr. May was chairman of the Psychology Department.

Dr. May noted two things about the Indians of Robeson County (They were legislatively named Cherokee Indians of Robeson County until 1953) upon his arrival at Pembroke: One--all traces of their Indian heritage had disappeared and two--they possessed tremendous drive, taking advantage of every opportunity--economically, politically, and educationally.

Dr. May was "shocked" at the tremendous growth of PSU.

Dr. May made many friends in the area and he and Ira Pate Lowry were driving forces behind Adago (the Indian word, according to Lowry, for friendship), the first Indian oriented newspaper in Robeson County.

Said Dr. May, "I enjoyed my stay at Pembroke and I value the friendship of those I met and worked with during those long ago days, especially Ira Pate Lowry and Sanford Sampson.

Mr. Lowry reminisced, "I really enjoyed Dr. May. We shared many wonderful experiences together. Dr. May and Lowry spent a lot of their spare time exploring the history of the Indians of Robeson County, and both came to the conclusion that the Indians were descendants of John White's so-called Lost Colony and the friendly Hatteras Indians.

PSU is thriving today and many contend, including Lowry and Sampson, that the John B. Mays of her storied past contributed mightily to her vibrant growth and success.

Ira Pate Lowry (right kneeling) kiddingly reminds Dr. John B. May (seated) that, according to his balding pate, time has taken its toll. Sanford Sampson (left kneeling) laughingly takes in the hijinks while the wives, (Mrs. May, left rear) and Mrs. Sanford Sampson look on in amusement. The long-distance friends had not seen each other since 1939 although they kept up their friendship via the telephone, letters and Christmas cards.
