JACK ANDERSON OPENS PSU'S LYCEUM SERIES

BY GENE WARREN

PEMBROKE--In the same hard-hitting, no-holds-barred style that has characterized his Pulitzer Prize-winning columns, famed reporter Jack Anderson hammered away at a number of topics Tuesday night here at Pembroke State University in a talk which drew a standing ovation at the end.

Among his topics were:

--How best to combat the energy crisis ("using alcohol fuel").

--the bureaucrats' continued stranglehold on Washington despite the new administration's promises.

--His candid thoughts on Jimmy Carter, Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon.

--The press' vital role as a watchdog of government.

--The Bureau of Indian Affairs sellout.

His talk lasted two hours, including a question-and-answer session, and finished up with an hour-long press interview. During the entire time, he was affable, charming and shooting straight from the hip. He didn't refer to a single note during his verbal marathon.

Inflecting his voice and using a variety of facial expressions to stress points, Anderson kept his audience captivated and "intrigued" to quote one student.

He concentrated strongly on the energy problem. "Our emphasis should be discovering new sources of energy," he said. "If we can put men on the moon and develop nuclear power--which we did when it seemed Germany might beat us to the punch--we can solve this problem."

A war correspondent during World War II, Anderson pointed to how Germany kept its war machine running "without oil." "Hitler used alcohol fuel," Anderson pointed out. "We can, too, because Germany taught us how Germany plans to use it for 75 per cent of their energy by 1980. Brazil will use the same percentage. We could use it without even having to change our engines. Our engines would run better with it."

Anderson said that alcohol fuel would cost 10 cents a gallon more than gas does now, but added, "If you think that's exorbitant, wait until a year from now and look at the gas prices."

WARRIORS BEGIN SEASON

Things look tough for Pembroke's Warriors as they return just two starters from last year's 4-5 outfit. But five non-conference games may be just what the Warriors need to do well in the conference.

First year coach Ned Sampson said, "I certainly hope the experience we get in the first bunch of games will help. Only Marvin Butler, who started the first four games last year before breaking his leg, and Charles McCallum are starters back from the 1976 team."

1977 WARRIORS SCHEDULE

Sept. 9 - at Rowland, 9 - Orrum, 16 - at Hallsboro, 23 - Tabor City, 30 - Product, Oct. 7 - West Columbus, 14 - at West Brunswick, 21 - Whiteville, 28 - at East Bladen, Nov. 4 - at Fairmont.

Indian Memorial Cottage Dinner A Success!

An idea has crystallized into a reality with the formation of the Braves Club, an athletic booster club designed to help the athletic program at Pembroke State University.

It is difficult to pin down the starting point of an idea but it might have germinated in conversation between Jim Paul, office manager at Pates Supply Company and Bruce Barton, editor of The Carolina Indian Voice.

Paul, an ardent supporter of PSU athletics, and a close friend of a number of the coaches, has long advocated community support for athletics at Pembroke State University.

Barton, who began the Carolina Indian Voice with the express idea of improving community-campus relationships, saw it as a way to further the goal of his newspaper.

Ed Crain, the hard working track coach at Pembroke State University, saw the need of a booster club a number of years ago and was instrumental in beginning a Braves Club that has recently fallen on hard times. Crain was delighted at the initiative shown by the community and agreed to serve on the planning committee of the new Braves Club. Said Crain, "our club was mostly campus orientated...we were pushing from the inside out. Now we have citizens from the outside interested, and this club is being operated from the outside in. We're off to a good start and I believe it will go over good."

The steering committee has decided to concentrate on selling one hundred charter memberships. Charter memberships will cost $50.00 and will include a number of special benefits, including admission to athletic events, decals for automobiles, sports brochures and schedules of athletic events. Additionally, plans are underway to place a huge banner in the varsity gymnasium with the names of the charter members emblazoned upon it. After the first 100 tickets are sold to the charter members a full fledged membership drive will get underway.

The Braves Club's goal is to at least raise all monies needed to provide 3 1/2 full athletic scholarships, the allowable limit in the Carolinas Conference of which PSU is a member.

The Braves Club will serve as a fund raising organization only. All monies raised will be turned over to the university.

Jim Paul said it best, "We don't want anything for ourselves except to see the community get involved with our university. PSU has a good athletic program and they deserve our support."

Chairing the temporary committee is Bruce Barton, editor of the Carolina Indian Voice. Other members besides Barton and Paul are: Ed Crain, track coach at PSU; James F. (Buddy) Bell, evaluator of the Governor's Reading Program in N.C.; Arnold Locklear, local attorney; Dr. Gerald Maynor, dean of student affairs at PSU; and Walter Oxendine, Development Officer at PSU.

The Braves Club is presently being chartered and paid memberships will be tax deductible. Those wishing to become charter members of the Braves Club are urged to contact any member of the steering committee or write Braves Club, c/o P.O. Box 1075, Pembroke, N.C. 28372.

Dinner Nets $14,000

Everyone present deemed it a success. The Indian Memorial Cottage Fund Raising Dinner, held at the PSU Cafeteria, netted $14,000 toward the goal of erecting a cottage on the Odom Home Campus in memory of the Indians who began the institution and kept the doors open during the difficult days before the campus became part of the N.C. Baptist Children's Homes.

Special MC was Dr. English E. Jones, Chancellor of PSU and Chairman of the Steering Committee for the Indian Memorial Cottage.

Among the many Indian leaders lauded was Sheriff's Deputy Garty Locklear, who conceived the idea of the fund raising dinner and, by all accounts, sold more $100.00 tickets than anyone else.

Special entertainment was provided by the beautiful Miss Lumbee, Ms. Brenda Hunt and the vivacious Miss North Carolina, 1975, Ms. Susan Lawrence.

Dr. English E. Jones served as MC.

Also appearing was Miss North Carolina, 1975, Ms. Susan Lawrence, who was as pretty as she seemed to be on TV when she finished as First Runner Up in the 1976 Miss America Pageant.

people and places and things

Special guest was TV comedian and humorist, Ralph Smith, who is most noted for his appearances on his brother's TV show, the Arthur Smith Show. He regaled the audience with his humorous stories and closed his presentation with a moving testimony of the need to love one another, most especially the children.

A presentation of slides on the NC Baptist Children's Homes, including Odom Home, was shown and narrated by Mr. Larry Sawyer, director of the Odom Home.

It was noted, during the course of the program, that more than $590,000 had been given in gifts and pledges toward the building program at Odom Home.

With the receipt of a gift of $25,000 from the Kresge Foundation, the patrons of the Indian Memorial Cottage, were nearing their stated goal of $90,000 with another $90,000 pledged in free labor.

It was estimated that approximately 400 patrons attended the dinner.

Humorist Ralph Smith regaled the audience.

Beautiful Miss Lumbee, Ms. Brenda Hunt, provided special entertainment in song.

PSU PRAISED BY UNC SYSTEM FOR ITS REMEDIAL PROGRAM

CHAPEL HILL--Pembroke State University has been cited by the University of North Carolina system for its program of providing remedial help for students who need it, while a number of other schools in the 16-campus system have been criticized for deficiencies in this area.

Of Pembroke State University, the UNC system report noted it as having a "pervasive, coordinated, integrated and accepted" remedial program backed with "a substantial hard-money investment."

Universities receiving the same praise as Pembroke State University were Appalachian State, East Carolina, N.C. Central, Western Carolina and Winston-Salem State.

Schools with "occasional or sporadic remedial programs" were cited as UNC-Chapel Hill, UNC-Charlotte, UNC-Greensboro and UNC-Wilmington.

Schools noted as not having special remedial courses included Elizabeth City State University and Fayetteville State University.

Schools with less comprehensive remedial programs, according to the report, are N.C. A&T and N.C. State University.

The N.C. School of the Arts in Winston-Salem was excluded from the study because of its specialized curriculum.

The 526-page study was recently completed by the Research Triangle Institute at the request of the UNC Board of Governors.
