direct the federal-Indian policy to all Indian people, the term 'Indian tribe' is defined by any one of a series of definitional factors enumerated in the recommendations of the American Indian Policy Review Commission. The Commission's final report, Volume 1, page 461 states:

"The term 'Indian tribe' is defined by any of a series of definitional factors enumerated in the recommendations which follow, and is intended to apply to all Indian people, including Indian communities, bands, clans, societies, alliances, and groups, whether amalgamations or fragmentations of Indian tribes; but its use in this chapter is not meant to divide any presently recognized tribal entities or to apply to any people who are already formally recognized as part of a tribe by the United States Government for the purposes of federal Indian law or programs.

"The Commission's report points out murky precedents, quirky administrations, indefensible bureaucratic decisions colonialism harsh on Indians, the removal policy, and landless Indians, to mention a few; all having denied American Indians justice and a decent place under the sun.

The American Indian Policy Review Commission was composed of a cross-section of the national Indian community, senators and congressmen renowned throughout the land, eleven task forces staffed with the finest minds in the area of Indian affairs, consultants with expertise in bureaucratic failure, a superlative staff with tireless devotion to the enormous task placed before them, and a budget of almost $3 million dollars: it would be like re-inventing the wheel to stop the progress already in motion.

"Thank you for your time and undivided attention.

Two Robeson Units Get $164,000 Grant

LUMBERTON — Two Robeson County agencies have been given a $164,000 grant to train construction workers while rehabilitating delapidated housing in four Cape Fear Region counties.

The federal grant, administered by the N.C. Department of Human Resources and Community Development, will be used by Robeson Technical Institute and the Robeson County Church and Community Center to train 20 workers.

The local project is one of three pilot programs being tested across the state.

Program trainees will receive classroom training at RTI, and then use those skills to rehabilitate housing in Robeson, Scotland, Hoke and Bladen counties.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

N.C. Parole Commission Member speaks to Pembroke Kiwanis

Mrs. George Dorsey Locklear celebrated her 81st birthday Sunday, April 16, with a dinner given by her children and grandchildren at her home on Route 1, Pembroke. (Blair W. Hunt photo)

Theodore Maynor, program chairman, introduced Henry W. Ozendine as speaker of the evening at the Tuesday evening meeting of Pembroke Kiwanis at Sims Restaurant.

Mr. Ozendine is a graduate of PSU, was a school teacher for six years, practiced law after graduation from law school, is a former representative, and presently is a member of the N.C. Parole Commission.

Mr. Ozendine stated that it costs $5,500 to keep a person in prison for one year. Probation and parole is an alternative to a prison sentence. The Law of the State says that every prisoner must be considered for parole when he has served 1/4 of his minimum sentence. Life sentences are eligible for parole after twenty years.

We have separate facilities for youthful offenders and they are eligible for parole at any time.

Ninety days prior to eligibility for parole, the inmate's file is brought before analysts. In the case of all felons, the Parole Commission writes the sentencing judge, the prosecuting attorney, the arresting officer, and others connected with the sentencing. The inmate is interviewed by a branch manager concerning his crime, his plans for the future for home and job. The inmate's home plan is investigated and reported to the Parole Commission with recommendations by the parole investigator. The Commission also receives a report on the prisoner's attitude and conduct while in prison; this report is prepared by the prison officials.

The case analyst, after studying all aspects of the case, makes recommendation to the Parole Board. The inmate's prior record and prison conduct carry great weight in determining his chance of parole.

Inmates are eligible for work release one year prior to his eligibility for parole.

The Parole Commission also advises the Governor on commuting sentences of inmates.

President James Albert Sampson presided, the invocation was given by Eddie Mac Locklear and singing was led by Ira Pate Lowry.
