Luther offers an outstanding record to the voters of N.C.

Luther Hodges, Jr., Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, was born in Leaksville (now Eden), North Carolina on November 19, 1936.

His father, the late Luther H. Hodges, was governor of North Carolina from 1953 through 1960, and U.S. Commerce Secretary under President John F. Kennedy. His mother was Martha Blakeney Hodges, of Monroe, N.C. She was a school teacher and principal of the high school in Leaksville. Hodges graduated from Tri City High School in Leaksville in 1953. He played basketball, football and tennis, and won most scholastic honors, including membership in the National Honor Society. His sophomore year was spent in Frankfurt, West Germany while his father served as director of the industry division of the Economic Cooperative Administration, better known as the Marshall Plan.

Hodges attended the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and graduated with an A.B. degree in economics in 1957. While at Carolina, he was involved in numerous campus activities and won nearly every campus and scholastic honor available: Phi Beta Kappa, Order of the Golden Fleece... president of the UNC Student Council... freshman letter in track. In his senior year, he was a regional finalist for a Rhodes Scholarship.

After college, Hodges went on active duty as a lieutenant in the U.S. Naval Reserve, serving with the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean for two years, 1957-59. He remained in the reserves for a total of eight years.

Returning from active duty, Hodges enrolled at Harvard University's Graduate School of Business Administration as a J. Spencer Love Fellow. He received an M.B.A. in 1961 and finished in the top one-third of his class.

Hodges then joined the faculty of the UNC School of Business Administration. One year later, he began his career with North Carolina National Bank.

He rose rapidly through the executive ranks of the corporation, and became chairman of the board of the bank in 1974, at the age of 37. NCNB is the largest financial institution in North Carolina and the largest in the Southeast.

Hodges resigned as chairman on June 30, 1977, to begin active preparation for his Senate candidacy.

The following is a listing of Hodges' career highlights:
