Lamanite Generation Performs for Scandinavians

Thousands of Scandinavians eagerly witnessed traditional and modern Indian songs and dances this summer performed by the popular Lamanite Generation from Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

the royal family at Marseisborg Palace, their summer residence.

The troupe also performed at the main outdoor stage at the famous Tivoli Gardens in Copenhagen, as well as Tivoli Park in other Danish cities.

Twins Jean and Joan Bullard, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Woods of Pembroke, were singers in the troupe. They received bouquets of roses as hits of the show after they sang "I Believe in Music" with the United States Air Force Band of Europe which played as part of the July 4th festival at Rebild, Denmark. The entire audience clapped their hands in rhythm, a sign of appreciation.

The largest live audience to witness the Lamanite Generation show was at the outdoor town square in downtown Stockholm, Sweden. There more than 15,000 people enthusiastically applauded the performance.

They graduated from Pembroke Senior High in 1975 and both are now juniors at BYU majoring in music. Jean was Miss Lumbee 1975-76 and active in various clubs and musical organizations in high school. Joan was Miss Pembroke State University Homecoming Queen and was also active in both vocal and instrumental music organizations. Both play several instruments.

By the time they completed the tour, more than 58,000 people had seen the shows in person. The entire show will be seen by millions of others in Scandinavian countries. It was taped by the Norwegian National Television Network and has been distributed to the three other countries for national network airing.

Highlight of the four-week tour through Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland was the July 4th festival at Rebild Park near Aalborg, Denmark. This is the largest July 4th celebration held outside the United States and was established to promote goodwill between Denmark and the USA.

To prepare for the tour, students took a semester course in the culture and history of all four Scandinavian countries and even learned some language. While in each country, they sang the national anthem and other songs in the appropriate language of the host country.

More than 11,000 people packed the three hills at Rebild, sitting through heavy rains to applaud the performers and speakers. BYU President Dallin H. Oaks was featured speaker. He encouraged the audience to make good use of leisure time, seeking activities that would lift the human race, enrich people's lives and conserve the beauties of the earth. His speech was translated and appeared in its entirety in several Danish newspapers.

Janie Thompson has been creative director of the Lamanite Generation since she organized it in 1971. Through song and dance, the troupe strives to perpetuate the traditional Indian culture. Several modern songs, including some originals such as "Go My Son" encourage Indian youth to get an education and help their people. Songs and dances from Polynesian and Latin American cultures are also included in the show and performed by natives of those areas.

During the festival the 36-member Lamanite Generation presented a handwoven Navajo blanket to Queen Margareth and Prince Henrik of Denmark. By special invitation from the queen, the troupe performed two days later for

Since its beginning, the troupe has performed in almost every state, most provinces of Canada, and in Mexico and several Central and South American countries.

In 1974 following a nationwide tour, a small group of 10 from the troupe performed for six weeks at U.S. military bases in West Germany. They received a special award from the USO for the highly popular variety show.

Grab Vs. January

May 23, 1922, was an exciting night as Grab took the light heavyweight championship from Tunney—and for someone, that night may lead to more excitement than he (or she) realizes.

According to the fight books, a film of that fight was made. Now, a big boxing fan and fight-film collector, Jim Jacobs, is willing to make the present owner of that film a little richer, and a little more famous.

Anyone with any information about this film can write to Jacobs at 9 East 40th St., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Soybean Yield Contest Planned

A soybean yield contest for Robeson County is being conducted by the Robeson County Extension Service in cooperation with the Robeson County Crop Promotion Association.

The contest is held annually to recognize top producers and reward them for their high production with a trophy or plaque, and invitation to the awards banquet. The top soybean producer in Robeson County will be entered in the State contest where he could win money and a trip to the National Soybean meeting.

To enter the soybean contest a producer must have at least three acres in on field, harvest and have the beans weighed separately in the presence of an agent, and provide production information. According to Fred May, Agricultural Extension Agent, we have some excellent fields of soybeans in Robeson County. You could have one of those prize winning fields. If one of your fields is yours, contact Fred May at 738-8111 to make an appointment to have your soybean yield checked and entered in the contest.

Agricultural Extension Service to Expand 4-H Program

The Robeson County Agricultural Extension Service is in the process of expanding the 4-H program. The purpose of the expansion program is to involve more adults and young people in the 4-H program. One of the ways the 4-H program will be expanded includes area meetings in the county. Each quarter there will be a meeting in four different locations of the county. These locations are Lumberton, Fairmont, St. Pauls and Maxton.

The agent stresses that 4-H offers many educational opportunities for young people.

These meetings, which will be conducted by the Extension 4-H agents and 4-H leaders, will include information that will always be structured in such a way that they will also benefit the public; therefore, anyone interested in finding out more about the 4-H program should plan to attend some of these meetings according to Eddie L. Locklear, assistant Extension agent, 4H. Parents are especially invited to attend and find out what 4-H has to offer to their

The first area meeting will be held at the St. Pauls High School on Monday, October 30, 1978, beginning at 7:00 p.m. Topics will include the expansion program, plans for the coming year, and any questions that may be asked during the meeting. Locklear stated that the public is invited to attend and participate in the meeting. This will be an excellent opportunity for people who live near the St. Pauls area to learn more about the Robeson County 4-H program. If you would like to have directions to the location of the meetings or additional information concerning the 4-H program please contact any of the 4-H agents by calling 738-8111 or you are invited to visit their offices located in the O.P. Owens Agriculture Building on Highway 72 near Lumberton.
